JOLTS AND JINGLES
 By Ad Brown

Yesterday.
 I'll bet a half of all I've got
 Half of your words were, "gee, its hot."

Jack London is on his way here. Fine chance to learn all about "primitive man" and "abyssmal brutes."

It was so hot in Boston the other day that the police arrested a man for wearing an overcoat. Would they shoot a man for wearing ear muffs?

Miss Oso Lonely says some men are known by the company they keep and some don't keep company.

A philosopher, according to some, is a man who has a corner on the days to tell us to smile.

In Ceylon 5 cent pieces are square. How about the meals?

Old Man Umph says: "Menny a man what wud like to hitch his waggin ter a star hasn't a waggin or herness either."

Red Letter Days.
 On looking backward one recalls
 At times some great event,
 Such as the time his hens laid eggs
 Or when he paid his rent—Dallas News.

To looking forward why not turn?
 One's apt to see ahead
 The time when men shall not pay rent—
 The hens will pay instead.

DROWNED MAN REVIVED; LOSES CONSCIOUSNESS

PORTLAND, Or., July 7.—Apparently drowned, C. H. Sorenson, formerly of Los Angeles, was pulled from the Willamette river by companions who had been swimming with him, worked over him until he recovered consciousness and then helplessly watched while life flickered from him.
 Once in the course of resuscitation Sorenson opened his eyes and gasped: "I'm going to live anyway." Then he lost consciousness again and died a few moments afterwards.

THE TELEGRAM'S ADVICE.

ONCE again the Portland Telegram is discussing Medford. It is a subject well worthy of discussion. Medford is distinctive among Oregon towns and is at once the pride, puzzle and despair of her sister cities.

The Telegram offers us some more advice (advice is the only thing Medford ever gets from Portland) much of it good, regarding the development of truck farming. No one is more aware of this need than the people of this section—but the fact remains that fruit raising attracts the settler and truck farming does not. Even the cities of the coast depend largely upon the foreigner for their market produce—and the coast cities almost exclusively so.

Nor has Medford wiped out its agricultural area by planting 80,000 acres of orchard. A portion of this orchard area is reclaimed brush and timber land, never before cultivated. Much of it was heretofore only spasmodically tilled. Orchards occupy only a relatively small portion of the valley. More land is being farmed today than ever in the valley's history—but there is three or four times the population to support.

Nor is fruit raising Medford's only resource. The largest sugar pine timber belt in the world is at her door. Over $35,000,000 in gold has been yielded by her mines, which are still producing. Great veins of coal seam her hills. Extensive copper mines await but transportation. Minerals of many kinds are scattered in commercial quantities through the mountains. Immense deposits of iron, lime, marble and granite await but the touch of capital to sustain large payrolls, but they wait in vain as far as Portland capital is concerned.

Geographically, Medford is the logical place for a city between Portland and Sacramento, for a distributing center for Southern Oregon, and Northern California. It is the terminus of the Oregon Trunk and will be of other roads and it has the energy, the spirit, the initiative necessary to fulfill its destiny.

It is true we need market gardeners and truck farmers, but we also need our great natural resources developed, our scenic wonders made accessible and a score of other things just as badly—and Medford will get them all in time.

Meanwhile heed the Telegram's advice which is as follows:

"Under the circumstances we know of no more inviting field for the truck farmer than Medford. Its people are willingly paying a high price for the food products which they import. These products should be raised at home, and if anything like the same price is paid for them, truck farmers will soon get well to do in that valley. Attention of the Medford people, in our judgment, has been too completely absorbed in apple and pear raising. They are now seeing only part of their problem. If a good proportion of the money now being shipped out for foodstuffs were only kept at home, as it should and can be, Medford money would be more generally scattered than it is, and we have no doubt the banks would hail with pleasure the added tone of health thus developed in municipal conditions. Hand in hand with the development of the finest business should go the development of the agricultural and fruit farming interests. In this way some of the big existing leaks will be stopped and the great problem ahead of Medford will be found much easier of solution."

FANNING THE FLAMES OF DISCORD.

THE Grants Pass Courier has evidently decided that Medford's co-operation is not wanted to make the mining congress a success and is doing all in its power to stir up discord and ill will between the two cities.

No single thing could have been done to chill the enthusiasm of Medford for the congress and frost the spirit of co-operation as much as the Courier's maliciously false accusations regarding the Fourth of July celebration here, printed elsewhere.

This is not the first time that the Courier has shown its pettiness and its captious carping spirit. In a thousand little ways this querulous newspaper has striven to fan and keep alive the old enmity and jealousy that existed in times long since gone by—and which for years the progressive element in both cities has striven to stifle, that harmony may reign.

The Courier's attack is so unfair and so untrue as to be unworthy of attention, were it not the culmination of a series of sneers against the "Bear Creek metropolis," and comes at a time when Medford had striven her utmost to give a creditable celebration.

The Courier does not represent the sentiment of Grants Pass where its utterances have little weight and are not taken seriously.

All Tastes Served at the Library

Under the title, "Don't Be a Quitter," Mr. S. H. Rauck has contributed an article, in the shape of a convenient pocket folder that throws further light upon the subject of the public library. Mr. Rauck is the librarian at Grand Rapids, Michigan. The article is full of food for thought, and brings the library before the public eye, as an educational institution of great public utility and opportunity. To quote: "Have you ever thought of continuing your education, getting more knowledge, absorbing new ideas, and enlarging your experience from the experience of others,—while you are at work?"
 "There is in this city an educational institution that enables you to do this very thing, whatever business, trade or calling you may follow."
 "The schools teach us to read and write and a lot of things we know, but we don't stop learning to know things when we leave school, for the gaining of knowledge is a continuous performance. Continue your education through the library."
 "Why not give several hours a week to the connected reading of books and papers that are worth while?"
 "It will afford the librarian great pleasure to talk this over with you whether you are using the library, or not."
 What Mr. Rauck says is equally true of the opportunities afforded by the public library of Medford, and of the spirit of willingness there is in this institution to serve the public needs as fully as possible.
 More and more in the purchasing of the new books, special needs are being considered.
 For the student of sociology, there are to be found upon the library's shelves such works as "The Beast," by Judge Lindsey; "Twenty Years at Hull House" and "The Spirit of Youth in the City Street," by Jane Addams; and "How Americans Are Governed," by Crittenden Marriot.

For those interested in science there is much new literature, including such works as that on irrigation by F. H. Newell. "The Economics of Forestry," by B. E. Fernow; Bailey's "Handbook of Birds of the Western United States," and "Flashlights on Nature," by Grant Allen.

For the eclectic literary taste a number of desirable books have been added, among them, "Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant," and "Man and Superman," by Bernard Shaw; "Life and Letters of Robert Browning," by Orr; "Leaders of the English Pre-Raphaelites," by three of their best literary exponents; and "Ulysses," a drama, by Stephen Phillips. The collector's taste is catered to by two choice books, published by the Stokes company, entitled respectively, "Chats on Old Furniture" and "Old China." Students of history will be delighted with the new "American Nation," History, prepared as it has been, by the scholars best qualified for noting and judging the various periods of development in American affairs. Then, there is good new fiction, besides. The aim has been, as nearly as possible, with the means at hand, to serve a varying taste, and a taste that is growing steadily as Medford grows.

The public is always welcome to use the library as a reading room during the hours that it is open, and all, whether regular patrons or not, will be cordially served.

Notice: The public library which was closed on Wednesday of this week, is open again.

COOLER WEATHER IS ENJOYED IN VALLEY

There was a scrambling for comforters last night over the city due to a sudden drop in the temperature after the hot spell which reached its climax Wednesday with a maximum temperature of 101½ degrees. Last night it turned off cool while Thursday was not at all bad. Today the mercury is down where it belongs and everyone is once again satisfied with the weather men. The temperature as caught by the weather bureau Thursday was: Maximum, 90; minimum, 55; mean, 72. It will be fair tonight and tomorrow and warmer.
