To cast a fly is as old as history, according to Mr. Gottleib. In fact, TO DIVORCE THEODORE if several outline pictures, cut on the side of a slab of limestone with his Jackknife by some Babylonian Walton can be relied upon, it was a favorite game on the banks of the sacred Euphrates even in those days. The only time a caster swats a fly is when he is preparing to make experiments on some new body of water and wants to learn the flies that hover over that particular water. Then he takes the specimen and carefully prepares models with which he decoys the fish with a dummy of the brand of food that he (the fish) has been used to grabbing.
