TRUST GOBBLE SAVED PANIC

Morgan Acted as Public Benefactor Is Subtance of Story Told of Sale of Tennessee Coal and Iron Company Plant to Steel Combine.

NEW YORK, July 29.—That J. Pierpont Morgan, in aiding the steel trust to gobble the Tennessee Coal and Iron company, was acting purely as a public benefactor was the substance of the story of the merger told here today by Lewis Cass Ledyard before the Stanley house investigating committee.

Ledyard said that his client, Colonel Oliver Payne, first suggested the sale an dthat he (Ledyard(had conducted the negotiations with Morgan. Ledyard then detailed the strained financial conditions existing in 1907 and recited at length the story of the all day and all night conferences in Morgan's library.

Story of Purchase.

"The last week in October," said Ledyard, "Payne told me that Moore and Schley were holding Tennessee stock, that they were deeply indebted to him, and that the banks had called on the firm for better securities.

"Payne then suggested that the United States Steel corporation might be induced to buy out the Tennessee company and said that he would suggest to Schley that the latter ask to see Morgan about it. At 10 o'clock that night Schley telephoned me and I went to his office.

"Schley outlined to me the situation of his company with outstanding debts of $30,000,000. Then I saw Morgan and outlined to him Moore and Schley's ideas exactly. He was most concerned at the aspect of the situation and expressed the gravest fear lest Moore and Schley fail and carry down with them not only firms in New York, but also in Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. Though the securities of all these firms were doubtful, the Moore and Schley case was the most aggravated.

To Avert Big Panic.

"Morgan said there was no telling who fail if Moore and Schley did. He at once summoned H. C. Frick, Judge Gary and others of the finance committee of the United States Steel corporation. Gary was most reluctant to buy the stock. Schley said he would take nothing below par, but Gary insisted it was worth no more than 60."

E. W. Oglebay of Cleveland was the next witness. He told of the sale of the Tennessee company, duplicating the story told yesterday by L. C. Hanna of the transaction.
