Unto whom I only answer: That could they once experiment what hunger, or, raththe leather and sliced it in pieces. Then ter of the river, to render it by these means supple and tender. Lastly, they scraped off the hair and roasted or broiled it upon the fire. And being cooked they cut it into small mor sels and ate it, helping it down with frequent gulps of water, which by good fortune they had right at hand."

French Official Red Tape.

Two men went to Nice lately from Italy to attend a funeral and took with them a wreath of flowers to which was fastened a silk ribbon bearing an inscription. They were informed at their destination that they would have to pay a duty equivalent to $25. The mourners protested, saying that the wreath was made of natural flowers on which there was no duty, but they were informed that the dutiable part was the silk and that according to the tariff laws, duty must be collected on the gross weight of the memorial emblem. Then the men agreed to throw the ribbon away, but this could not be done on French soll, and so they journeyed back to the frontier, where they disposed of the ribbon, boarded a train for Nice with the ribbonless wreath and arrived too late for the funeral.

Keep In the Sunshine. There are only two kinds of people in the world-the people who live in the shadow and gloom and those who live on the sunny side of the street. These shadowed ones are sometimes called essimists, sometimes people of melan choly temperament; sometimes they are called disagreeable people. But wherever they go, their characteristic is this-their shadows always travel on before them. These people never bear their own burden, but expose all their wounds to others. They are all so busy looking down for pitfails and sharp stones and thorns on which to step that they do not even know that there are any stars in the sky. These falks live on the wrong side of the street. And yet it is only twenty feet across to the other sidewalk, where unshine always lies.-Newell Dwight
