NO SCHOOL FOR GRIFFIN CREEK

Mountaineers Of Upper Section Fail In Effort To Have New District Created, Taking in Some Of Lower Valley Ranches and Orchards.

There will be no church or school built for the mountaineer of upper Griffin creek this year was the edict of the district boundary board of Jackson county in its recent meeting at Jacksonville. Reverend Stuart dressed neatly in his long black coat and backed by most of the members of his congregation, made an eloquent and heart-touching appeal for the children of the district whose education was being neglected on account of the lack of school facilities. He urged that property interest should not be protected to the disparagement of education.

Jeff Skinner, the proprietor of the Lone Star ranch on Griffin creek, whose property had been included in the proposed new school district, protested he had young children who were just beginning school and asserted that the trip of two or three miles up into the mountains to school would be impossible for them while the Griffin Creek school, a mile and a half away, over a good road towards town was readily accessible.

M. H. Harper, the well known orchard expert of Griffin creek, attempted to refute Mr. Skinner's argument and advanced a few statistics about the little fellows rolling in the snow trying to get from the mountains down to the valley school.

Earnest Adams whose property was also included by the mountaineers in the new district, then had a few words to say about the mountaineers building their own church. But Billy Holmes, who also felt that his property would be unjustly taxed if the new district were formed was just adding climax to the discussion, pleading that his and neighbors' property interest should not be injured for the sake of the spiritual welfare of Rev. Stuart's congregation, when Judge Neil closed the discussion by throwing the petition for the new school out of court because the places where the notices were to be placed had not been stated in it.

In single file a sorrowful string Rev. Stuart led his followers from the room to their wagons from whence they departed for the hills with hope that another year they would be more successful and get those rich lowland farmers to build them a school.
