RICH ORE IN APPLIGATE MINE

Strike Made On Thompson Creek Near Appligate Postoffice—Is Owned By John R. and Floyd Bailey—Rock Looks Good.

The Appligate section is again the scene of a rich mining strike this time at the Afterthought mine, a property which has been worked for several years by its owners, John R. and Floyd Bailey. The mine is located on Thompson creek about one and a half miles from Appligate post office in the same section of country and not many miles distant from the once famous Steamboat mine, which produced over $600,000.

The owners have been for some time tunneling in the lower of the two levels and exposing ore running from $200 to $500 per ton, but one day last week they struck an exceptionally rich streak of specimens ore which is heavy with free gold. This rock is white quartz literally heavy with metal and shot full of free gold. It is found in a well defined contact between andesite porphyry and slate and has every appearance of being a permanent vein, and is pronounced by many as the most promising property in this section.

Quite an amount of the rich ore has been taken out and is being marketed out by hand as there is no mill within easy reach. While the vein which is about 26 inches in width, is not all specimen rock, there is so much that the free gold can easily be seen from top to the bottom of the drift. It is found at a depth of about 50 feet.

This property was discovered by the Baileys some years ago and sold for $1,000 to a man of small mining experience who, after working it for some time, became discouraged and sold out to the present owners for a fraction of the original price.

CYCLONE FORMATION.

The Mechanical Laws Are the Same as in a Whirlpool.

Any one can make the exact counter part of a cyclone if he so desires. Of course a cyclone is caused by the air over a big area getting warm and light with small pressure. This air consequently tries to rise almost in a body and leaves a partial vacuum behind, but the outside cold air rushes in from all sides. Now, it is a scientific and mechanical truth that when fluid runs in from all sides toward a central point it causes a whirlpool or rotation of the fluid. The exact analogy of a cyclone, then, although with the fluid water instead of air, is seen when the stopper is pulled out of the bottom of a basin full of water. A vacuum is formed, and as far as the water is concerned, is caused by the water immediately over the stopper rushing out. The rest of the water rushes in from all directions, and a whirlpool is the result. There is no difference here from the air cyclone in the air the force with which it rushes toward the center greatly compresses the air whirling at that point and makes it very dense—so dense, in fact, that a straw carried in the center whirl can be driven into a big block of wood without bending. Of course in a whirlpool the water is not compressed, remaining practically the same in density all the time. That is one highly important property of water: it is practically incompressible. Nevertheless it is very interesting to see the whirl form in a basin and know that the mechanical laws are the same as in the formation of a cyclone many miles wide.—Harper's Weekly.

NEW JERSEY TEA.

Red Root, That Did Good Service in Revolutionary Days.

You housekeepers of today whose favorite brands of Orange Pekoe, English Breakfast, India and Ceylon, etc., diffuse their fragrance over your tea table would hardly suppose that tea, or, rather, a fairly good substitute for it, was once made from the leaves of one of our prettiest New Jersey wild flowers. Yet so it was in the old turbulent days of the American Revolution, when they had so much trouble over the imported article and used various beverages as substitutes for that to which they had become accustomed.

New Jersey tea, or red root, as it is also called, is a low growing shrub with many branches, seldom over three feet high, and is found from Canada to Florida, growing usually in dry wooded sections. It is very abundant in New Jersey, for which it is named. It blooms profusely in July and is so showy, with its many pangled white blossoms, as to be quite worth a place in the gardens as an ornamental shrub. It has a dark red root, with leaves downy beneath and very much veined, by which it is easily distinguished from the pure tea. An infusion of the leaves prepared in the same manner as the genuine article has somewhat the taste of ordinary grades of the tea of the orient, but is not supposed to possess any of its stimulating properties.—Exchange.

COLONIST RECORD MAY BE BROKEN

Low Rates From East To Pacific Coast Became Effective Saturday—Much Literature Has Been Distributed Throughout Nation.

No predictions will be made by the railroad officials as to the number of people who will take advantage of the low colonist rates to the Pacific coast, but all feel certain that the numbers will exceed the fall travel of last year. The rates went into effect Saturday morning and the first influx of homeseekers is expected this week. The rates will be in effect until October 15.

A great deal of effort has been expended by the railroads on advertising these rates and everything possible will be done to make the trip pleasant. The country of the northwest and the resources and advantages of every section have been carefully written up and placed before prospective homeseekers.

J. H. O'Neill traveling passenger agent, and J. L. Miller, city passenger agent, of the Harriman lines in Oregon, will meet their trains at Huntington and give their personal attention to the colonists, giving all possible directions and information. The Harriman system has issued and distributed 440,000 leaflets giving the colonists information in regard to the different sections covered by its trains.

All of the trains will be equipped with a la carte diners. A special feature of the Harriman trains will be cars with high back lunging seats. On these cars will be music and concerts will be given daily.

Agents of the transcontinental roads everywhere have been working toward making this year's travel the heaviest. Even the Hariman agents in Europe, at London, Antwerp, Bordeaux, Hamburg and Liverpool have been working toward this end.

Of special importance is the payment system by which a resident of the west can pay the fare of a relative or friend to the local agent of the road over which he is to come and the transportation will be furnished the person for whom it was bought at his end of the line. This does away with the delay of sending the money and buying the ticket in the east.

The fare from Chicago while these rates are on is $33, and from the Mississippi or points west $25.

Not to Be Fooled.

A mission worker in New York tells of a youngster who had never been to the country and the occasion of a "fresh air" excursion whereof he was a member.

One day this lad was seen closely examining a certain trim, well made object on the farm. He stared at it for awhile and then shook his head dubiously.

"What are you looking at, son?" asked the farmer.

"Where's the doors and windows?" inquired the boy.

"Doors and windows? Why that's not a house; it's a haystack."

"Excuse me, pop," returned the youngster. "You can't string me that way. Hay doesn't grow in lumps like that."—Lippincott's.

They Had No Warning.

Two young employees of a florist in Philadelphia, who are supposed to be variously employed in the rear of the establishment while the boss looks after things in the front, were recently startled by the appearance of the "old man" while they were engrossed in a game of checkers.

The proprietor was justly indignant. "How is it," he demanded, "that I hardly ever find you fellows at work when I come out here?"

"I know," volunteered one of the youths. "It's on account of those rubber heels you insist on wearing."—Harper's Magazine.

Wooden.

A cycling master was riding down hill the other day when his hat blew off.

A passing countryman picked it up and took it to him as he circled round, saving him the trouble of getting off. "I really must get a hat guard to keep it on," remarked the master as he rode off without a word of thanks.

The yokel's reply was short, but expressive. It was simply, "Get a nail!"—Sheffield Telegraph.

Some Feeling.

One day small Tommy was given a piece of fish for dinner. "What kind of fish is this?" he asked.

"Shad," replied his mother.

"Well," said Tommy, "a shad must be pretty sure of anything it feels in its bones."—Chicago News.

A Running Race.

The players should form in a long line, one behind the other. The leader starts running and is followed by all the rest. They must be sharp enough to do exactly as the leader does. After running for a moment or two in the ordinary step the leader changes to a hopping step, then to a marching step, quick time, then to a marching step, slow time, claps, runs with hand on sides or shoulders or any other manner which may occur to him.

Finally the leader runs slowly round and round into the center and can either wind the line up tightly or can turn it on bearing the center and run out again. This is a nice game for an outdoor party.

Origin of Sirlin.

The word sirlin came from the French "surlin," which means "beside the loia." The spelling was changed to sirlin as the result of a joke on the part of James I. of England.

One evening he was feasting after a long day's hunt, when a surlin of beef was placed before him. It was so delicious that, laying his sword across it, he knighted it, saying, "Not surlin, but Sir Loin!"

Always from that time this cut of meat has been known by its noble name of sirlin.
