

On the Square, Jeff Has a Brain Like a Flaxseed

By "Bud" Fisher

IN THE REALM OF FASHION

Seasonable Headgear.

Two hats suitable for the long sunny days of midsummer are illustrated here. One is a wide brimmed creation of white chip adorned with a profusion of roses. The other is a drooping lingerie hat of fine embroidery, garnished with a garland of moss roses.

Buttons and Buttons. Save the buttonhole strip from all not too badly worn white garments and use them again as an invisible closing on new waists and dresses. You will save both time and labor.

Never throw away good hooks, eyes and buttons, but cut them off your worn out clothing and save them for future use. An exception should be made, of course, in the case of discarded clothing given to the poor; it is a stingy charity that saves in this way!

When you cut the buttons off a garment, string them on a thread before dropping them in the button box; then when you need buttons you can tell without trouble what kinds you have and how many of each kind.

THE NEWEST KINKS IN HAIRDRESSING

The Calotte Arrangement Looks Both Natural and Becoming.

"Many changes are taking place in hairdressing this season," says the Dry Goods Economist. "Several new calotte styles are being shown. One of the most interesting of these is the flat calotte, which attained such a vogue when the hair was worn in a mop about the head.

"The new calotte is wholly different, however, as it is adjusted over the head, while the false hair, instead of covering it in a straight caplike form, is laid in soft tresses or waves in five different sections.

"Thus there are attached to the calotte foundations five somewhat thick short braids. These are lightly waved, and after the calotte is adjusted to its position at the crown of the head these five braids or tresses form a beautiful swirl about the knot.

in a close knot at the back. Over this the calotte is placed, and then are arranged the swirls or tresses which lie loosely about the knot. When the dressing is complete it seems as if the hair were just lightly and naturally in a soft succession of swirls. The very smartest women in Paris are now affecting this style. Girls from fifteen to twenty years of age wear the hair cut off in front—that is, bobbed like that of a child. The bobbed hair falls well over the ears, is waved and the ends turned under. The back hair is then knotted at the back, and the new swirling calotte is adjusted.

Huge Collars. The sailor collar has evidently not only come to stay, but has increased its influence. The little over-the-shoulders effect has now grown to the really striking waist length style and has made its appearance on coats, on blouses and on one piece frocks. Many broad, circular collars are fashioned in hoods at the back. A stunning blue silk suit for a young girl had a collar of white silk which drooped into the monk's hood and was trimmed with white silk cord and a tassel.

DEFECT THAT WAS EASILY REMEDIED

Amusing Break of an Uncultured Theatrical Man.

The question of the New theater's defective acoustics, now known to fame as the "echo," reminds me of the well authenticated incident in the theatrical career of the late John Stetson. On one occasion, while he was managing the Union Square theater in New York, an important star complained that the acoustics were abominable and that he didn't see how he was to give an effective performance under the circumstances. Stetson, although he had been identified with the Globe theater in Boston, was not overburdened with Boston culture, and the term "acoustics" was not included in his picturesque and unique vocabulary, but he surmised that it was something tangible—some sort of a "prop."

However, as he wasn't quite sure, he looked the star straight in the face and asked: "What is it you're bawling about?" "Acoustics, Mr. Stetson! You've got the worst kind of any theater I ever played in."

"Why, man," said Stetson—"why didn't you say so before? I'll speak to the stage manager at once, and before the curtain goes up tonight I'll have him beg, buy, borrow or steal the best kind of 'covesticks' to be had on any stage in New York."—Albert Ellery Bergh in Columbian Magazine.

Rich Man Spoke to Him. "One of my acquaintances is much interested in the Chagrin Falls Hunt club and is an onlooker at most of the functions of that organization," says Ward Jackson. "The other night he said to me, with some show of enthusiasm, that gradually he was getting acquainted with the club members. "Why, Dan Hanna came right up and spoke to me today," he said excitedly.

"Is that so?" I replied. "What did he say to you?" "He said, 'Don't get too near that horse there, or he'll kick your darned head off.'"—Cleveland Leader.

FOR THE CHILDREN

What Mother Said. I know a little girl of nine. (I wonder if you've met her?) I think if you should see her once You never would forget her. She's such a fussy little girl; There is so much to fret her. It is so very hard to learn The tasks her teachers set her. She wants to do so many things Her mother doesn't let her. But, then, when she is ten years old Perhaps she may do better. I'm sure she will not like to think When she's a little older How very, very many times Her mother had to scold her. If she would think about it now Perhaps it might withhold her From yielding to the fretfulness That has so long controlled her.

NEW TALES THAT ARE TOLD

The Huntsman's Awakening. A story told many times at Meadowbrook in its week of polo activity concerns Edwin D. Morgan, horseman and devotee of sport, whose estate is at Wheatly Hills, not far off. Morgan had been entertaining the assembled company in the club one night before a hunt, but finally had gone to bed despite the protestations of his companions. His room was on the ground floor, almost adjoining the pince where the congealed spirits were gathered. The master of hounds conceived a plan for bringing Morgan back into the circle. He brought in the drag, trailed it through the clubroom, into the bedroom of Morgan, across his bed and out the window. Then he unleashed twenty couples of hounds. They followed the hot scent full cry, giving tongue as they leaped upon and over the sleeper's bed and crowded through the window. History does not relate what Morgan said. It is asserted, however, that he rejoined the group he had left, somewhat bruised and cut, but decidedly wide awake—New York Post.

Record For Size. Senator La Follette, himself one of the most direct of speakers, has a natural horror of speeches of the rambling, boring kind. In a recent session a certain senator, after elaborating in a speech of two hours a statement that would have been better made in a speech of two minutes, concluded: "And that's the situation, gentlemen, in a nutshell." "Gracious," said Senator La Follette, sotto voce, "what a nut!"

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Guessed at Last. The philosopher was sitting on a bench in the park thinking about the whyness of the wherefore when a man rushed by him. The fugitive was followed by another man who yelled at the philosopher: "Catch him! Lay hands on him!" But the philosopher did not budge. "Are you deaf? Why did you not hold the murderer?" "Murderer? What is a murderer, sir?" "What a question! A murderer is one who kills."

"Oh, you mean a butcher, then?" "What an idiot! I mean one who kills another man."

"I see. You mean a soldier."

"Stupid! A murderer is one who kills another man in time of peace."

"Now I have it. You mean an executioner."

"I never saw such stupidity! I mean a man who comes to the house of another and kills him."

The people of this city should buy "Made in Oregon" goods from the local merchants whenever the price and quality are equal to Eastern made goods.
