ESCAPE A JOKE SAYS LYMAN

Man Tells How He Evaded the United States Officials—Says Jail at Klamath Falls Is an Open Work Affair.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 24.—Lying on a cot in the Alameda jail hospital ward and complacently jingling a pocketful of money, Dr. John Grant Lyman, federal prisoner, laughed and told of his adventures and escapades during the last three weeks while trying to elude the vigilance of the United States authorities.

"I thought it would be a good joke," he said, "for a man with a broken ankle under guard in a hospital to get away but it has made trouble for others."

"I want to take all the blame, the guard knew nothing of my plans and Nurse Thorne didn't know that I was a genuine prisoner. We slipped from the guard and hired a series of automobiles to take us across the Oregon line. With my broken ankle I knew it would be only a matter of days before we would be caught as I could only hobble from the car to the hotels."

"The jail at Klamath Falls was an open work affair and overcrowded. Some of the inmates, tiring of it, kicked out a plank and departed. Quite a number, including myself, were content to remain as the authorities had been treating us all very well."

"I wish to assume all the blame that is coming."

DENVER, Colo.—Heart disease to day killed Major G. E. Randolph, 70, who for a time commanded the third artillery corps during the civil war.

DEATH IS BRAVED FOR DAILY BREAD

Crowd Watches Workmen at Top of Wireless Station Masts on Top of Hotel Medford, Which, by the Way, Resembles a Two-Masted Bark.

The Hotel Medford, with its new wireless station on the roof, has assumed the appearance of a two-masted bark and the attention of passers by is directed at the pair of conical-headed men who are defying death at the top of the main mast. At a height about equal to that attained by Eugene Ely in his flight over Medford and on footing scarcely more secure, these men calmly smoke their pipes and talk of the wonders of the valley while they tighten the guy wires and place innumerable bolts.

Across in the park all day a crowd watches the work and there is much speculation as to the manner in which the workmen are protected and as to the height at which they are working. Inquiry brought out the statement that there are close to 200 feet above the ground and that their bodies and souls are held to the needle-like pole by leather straps.

Like all aerial mechanics these workmen used to be sailors and in common with their kind they have great pity for an aviator, who recklessly risks his life. The other day a pole upon which they had been working broke, and by the greatest of good fortune, it chose a time when no one was on it. "There's no danger at all the way they are protected," says the man on the sidewalk, but let's listen to what the man on the pole has to offer:

Later: The Mail Tribune tried to interview the workers but could not find an interviewer who would climb up and talk to them.

THIS MAN DOESN'T WANT A WOMAN

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 24.—Pete Cassidy, a "back to nature" advocate, who tramped across the continent to establish a "sunshine cult" in southern California, is in Los Angeles today looking for a wife who is willing to live principally on ray rolled oats.

The "back to nature" man also stipulated that the future Mrs. Cassidy must not dress to be admired, must not wear shoes and must be precisely to his liking in her mode of life. Hats are also tabooed.

"Cassidy does not want a wife—he wants a horse or monkey," said one Los Angeles woman today. "He should strike out for the banks of the Nile or the Congo and he could probably find what he is looking for."
