THE FAMOUS BOARDING HOUSE SCENE FROM "THE COUNTRY BOY," COMING TO THE MEDFORD OPERA HOUSE TUESDAY

The biggest comedy success of the year, "The Country Boy," will be presented by Henry B. Harris at the Medford opera house November 7, 1911. This comedy, which is typically American, belongs to the same class of plays as "The Fortune Hunter," "The Man From Home" and "Get Rich Quick Wallingford." It consists of a sprinkling of sentiment, some pathos and a full dose of humor; a combination that appeals to every class of theatregoers. That its success has been nothing short of sensational is proven by the fact that it crowded the Liberty theatre, New York, for five months, and Powers' theatre, Chicago, for two months, and will be presented here exactly as during its engagement in those cities. The piece is in four acts, two of the scenes being laid in a small village in New York state, and the other two in a cheap boarding house in the great metropolis. The story of the play shows a country boy, full of enthusiasm, folly, and the egotism of youth, who leaves his mother and sweetheart behind to prove himself in a great city. He falls in a material way, becomes involved with a pliant and unscrupulous woman, is discovered by his sweetheart and prospective father-in-law and cast off. In despair he contemplates suicide. A newspaper man, also broken and at the end of his resources, finds him and suspects his design. He purposely directs the talk to suicide and confides to the boy that he is weary of life and about to end it all, whereupon the boy earnestly endeavors to dissuade him. The result is a determination on the part of both to go back to the boy's home town and start a newspaper, which proves successful. Besides staging the piece in excellent shape, Mr. Harris has supplied a cast of well-known players which includes Alfred Cooper, Frank McCormack, Doan Borup, Frank E. Jamison, George Schaeffer, Olive Templeton, Elda Furry, Charlotte Langdon and Nellie F. Moore.

Before I took Cardui, I had headache and backache, and sometimes I would cry for hours. Now I am over all that, and can do all kinds of housework. I think it is the greatest medicine on earth."

In the past fifty years, thousands of ladies have written, like Mrs. McGill, to tell of the benefit received from Cardui.

Such testimony, from earnest women, surely indicates the great value of this tonic remedy, for diseases peculiar to women. Are you a sufferer? Yes? Cardui is the medicine you need. We urge you to try it.
