Medford Approach Mentioned.

"The approach from Fort Klamath to the rim of the lake at the present lodge of the Crater Lake company should first be built by grading only, and then the grading of the rim road from the lodge of Roundtop, a distance of 20 miles, should be completed," says Major Morrow.

"After the completion of this work, if the Natron cut-off is completed, the Bear Creek road should then be improved by surfacing, while the remainder of the rim road is being graded. The road to The Pinnacles should be undertaken last of all.

"The first appropriation should be $100,000, with $75,000 for the next two years, and after that $100,000 a year until the system is finished. The grading from Klamath entrance and the Bear Creek of eastern entrance, including 20 miles of the rim road connecting the two establishments of the Crater Lake company, together with considerable surfacing of this much of the system, could be completed in three working seasons, and all of this road, together with the Medford entrance, could be graded and surfaced by the end of the fourth season.

Early Construction Urged.

"It is the opinion of this office that as much of the work as possible should be completed prior to the San Francisco exposition in 1915, in which event the trip to the park will be one of the favorite side trips of tourists going from Portland to San Francisco.

A continuing contract, providing for the completion of the entire road system, similar to continuing contracts on river and harbor contracts, is strongly recommended."

The road around the rim of the lake is planned to cross the face of the Watchman pass, behind Glacier peak, returning to the rim before passing behind Liao rock, thence following the rim closely until Cloudeap is reached. It then passes successively behind the mountain passes of the inside slopes of Mount Scott and Duffen cliff, but returns to the rim again at San Creek notch, from which point it recedes, passing behind Vidua and Garfield peaks. It returns to the rim at the site of the present lodge of the Crater Lake company, following the rim thence to Watchman. The total length of the rim road is between 34 and 36 miles.
