Attractions at the Medford Theatre

MISS ROSE MELVILLE HERE WEDNESDAY.

The company in support of Miss Rose Melville this season, which will be her last on the stage, is the best collection of individual talent that she has ever had assisting her in the presentation of that delightful comedy, "The Hopkins." This is the last season that Miss Melville will be seen as the funny little country girl with the pigtail, pinafore, the striped stockings and the panella gaiters. Mr. J. B. Strling has given Miss Melville the best company of her career and an entirely new production in every respect. Medford theater January 10.

GEORGE KELLY AS "THE VIRGINIAN."

One of the most enjoyable theatrical events of this season at the Medford theatre, January 11, will be the visit of "The Virginian," with George Kelly playing the name part and an exceptionally well balanced company. In these days of problem plays and morally off-colored robbery dramas, this charming stage adaptation of Owen Wister's widely read book is doubly welcome. As presented by the La Shelle Virginian company, "The Virginian" has already proven a most excellent entertainment and ever since its initial production has been receiving the attention it richly deserves at the hands of seekers after better class of dramatic entertainments. It is doubtful if any play produced of late years has been more genuinely successful than "The Virginian." George Kelly in the title role has a splendid opportunity for both emotional and comedy scenes, of which he takes the fullest advantage; his portrayal of the character being one of the best in his brilliant stage career. "The Virginian" will be sumptuously staged and that the acting company will be most competent is guaranteed by the La Shelle Virginian company, under whose management the play continues to be presented. Haskins for health.
