WHAT IS BEAUTY?

By Madame Travilla.

Beauty's path through life is a sort of rose bordered one, a royal progress; for to Beauty the world, big and little, high and low, pays homage. Just as the individual woman has the ability to win favor and to please does she come to realize that the first and most potent influence is physical beauty.

If there is a woman who does not care to look well, who does not care to win affection and love, she is an abnormal creature and with her we have nothing to do. It is simply human nature, a desire implanted in every normal woman's heart to wish for admiration and love.

Assuming that it is not only the natural desire of woman but also her duty to please, in order to succeed, she must train herself to that end. First of all, let me impress it upon you, that end is not obtained by the use of paint and rouges.

Mohammedans say, "To Eve God gave two-thirds of all beauty." Not without purpose could Divinity have bestowed such power. Dr. Johnson, who wrote the English dictionary, said, "Nature has given woman so much power that the law cannot afford to give her any more."

It is certainly doubly true that we cannot consider the subject of woman's beauty, which exercises so powerful an influence for both good and evil, without the study of its sources and in turn answer that baffling question, what is beauty?

From the beginning of history the two forces most potent in moving the world have been beauty and gold, and when the two powers were pitched one against the other it was not beauty that lost.

There are two sorts of beauty: One working for the destruction of good, leaving a path like the trail of a serpent, the other uplifting and working for the highest, noblest purpose. The first sort of beauty is only a desire to please and gratify the senses for a moment only to plunge into the depths of despair that follow. "Dearest Nature, strong and kind, is swift to avenge the abuse of her gifts and Beauty that has no that appeals to the imagination and which analysis can never grasp. It is this that makes the effect of the doll-like beauty fade as the seafoam. Here is the definition of beauty I found in the dictionary before me: "Those qualities which are most pleasing to the eye together with grace and charm—a beautiful woman." Yours for charming womanhood, MADAME TRAVILLA.
