WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12.—How he euchered John D. Rockefeller out of the rich tribute levied by the oil king upon the Mesaba Range ore properties was detailed by J. J. Hill to the Stanley investigating steel committee.

Hill said his leases in the Mesaba range were made through his sons. The first was acquired in connection with his purchase of the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad, a bankrupt line running from Duluth to the ore fields. With a little smile Hill testified that he grabbed the line only when he heard that Rockefeller was after it.

Hill estimated the tonnage leased to the steel corporation at $5,000,000 tons of ore.

He thought the steel trust leased from him three to five thousands of acres of ore bearing property. This lease insured to the Hill roads a high freight rate on ore and an exclusive contract for its transportation. Hill said he paid $4,640,000 for 25,000 acres of the lands and the road. None of this money was paid out of the funds of the Great Northern road. Asked to enumerate the companies in which he was interested, Hill merely looked wise and laughed.
