SPUDS GREW FROM PARINGS

Reminiscences of Early Days in Rogue River Valley Are Told at Meeting of Central Point Commercial Club.

(Central Point Herald.) Speaking of weather conditions in the Commercial club rooms Monday evening, Mayor Leever, a native son of the valley, told his grandfather, Isaac Constance, who came to the valley with his family in 1852, and secured a donation claim on a portion of which part of this city now stands, and how, in February, 1853, he planted his potatoes and garden stuff, even beans and other tender vegetables. These all grew rapidly and were not injured in the least with frost.

Potatoes for the winter had been packed in from Oregon City and were so valuable that the parings will be saved and planted. From these potato parings, planted in February, Mr. Constance raised a beautiful crop, having more potatoes than he could use. The following winter, however, a heavy snow fell, and the Rogue River Indians, who had failed to put on their usual amount of food, were starving. Mr. Constance supplied them with spuds from his beautiful supply and by this means their lives were saved. Two or three years later, during the Indian war, Chief Sam and his followers came down from the upper Rogue river in war paint and trappings intending to massacre all the whites in the country. They camped at Table Rock and while there old Sam remembered the Constance potato parings. "No killing Constance, no killing him neighbors," declared Chief Sam, and he forthwith sent his young daughter, Mary, to tell Mr. Constance that no harm should befall him or his neighbors' families.

The girl, young Rogue river in the night and walked to the Constance ranch, where she delivered her welcome message. The Indians continued on down the river to the Galice creek mines, where they planned to kill all of the miners, but fortunately the miners had been reinforced by soldiers, the Indians were repulsed and scattered. This raid practically ended the story of the big battle at Table Rock which was said to have taken place at that time when rangers, say many Indians threw themselves from the rock and were dashed to death 1000 feet below, is a pure myth. No battle occurred there and no Indians were killed in such a way. However, had it not been for Isaac Constance's potato parings it is difficult to tell what might have happened in this part of the valley during the war.

SALEM, Ore. — During the month of January there were 329 accidents in Oregon, of which 12 were fatal, according to the report issued by State Labor Commissioner O. P. Hoff.

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — Los Angeles business men cannot be trusted to carry firearms. This is the city council's decision in turning down Chief Sebastian's plan for a police reserve of business men to serve without pay.
