

MANY LAUGH AT NEWLYWEDS

The Newlyweds at the opera house last night furnished two hours of splendid amusement. The author did not intend anything serious when he wrote the play, and the same may be said for the musical composer. The music, however, was bright and tuneful. The dialogue did not reveal much of a plot, but it went off bang as they say, and gave the audience no time for criticizing. The cast was a good one. The real fun maker however, was James E. Rosen. The author must have seen this little fellow and written the play around him. His appearance at times was uncanny. He, however, kept the audience laughing, and that was his mission in Medford.

There is an entertainment coming to Medford, however, on March 29th, that is among the real ones—Lulu Glaser in "Miss Dudsack." This opera has the reputation of being far above the average. The music was written by Rudolph Nelson, and it ranks in the same class with the Merry Widow and Chocolate Soldier. The production will be a complete one, both in scenery, personnel of the cast, and a complete orchestra which the company carries. The plot of Miss Dudsack is laid in Scotland, and the music is said to be reminiscent of the old Scotch melodies. Grant Stewart and George Hobart are responsible for the Libretto, which in itself, is a recommendation. We would advise our friends to see this production, for it will be worth while.

MULKEY ALMOST HAD A CASE

Noticing a diminutive person, resembling a six year old boy, walk into the bar at the Medford hotel Friday, District Attorney Mulkey, with his head full of the selling-liquor-to-minors cases which have been before the grand jury the past week, followed the small person in. When the urchin walked up to the bar and climbed on the brass foot rail, peered over the edge of the bar and ordered a Scotch highball, the district attorney stepped up and, touching the youth on the shoulder, said:

"Don't you know that minors are not allowed in here?" "Sure I do," replied the youngster, "how'd they come to let you in?" The youngster was Napoleon Newtwey. The kid is 26 years old, and though he is only 42 inches high.
