Base Ball—The National Game

Almost over night a change has come over the game that we are proud to call the American National Sport, and Base Ball as it will be played with the Cork Center-Ball during the coming season, will be a more interesting pastime for both players and spectators than the game we know of years ago, when almost any kind of equipment seemed to be good enough. The Cork Center Ball has rescued Base Ball from the danger which was just becoming apparent to those who have been watching its development for thirty-five years past, the danger of getting it just a little too machine-like; the pitchers' battle looked good in print as explained by the Base Ball scribe, but did it look as good to the spectator? Wouldn't he have rather seen a couple of base hits and perhaps a two or three bagger, if not indeed a smashing home run? Would the pitchers' battle bring him back to see another game, or the contest where there was plenty of hitting and base running? The cork center makes a ball that is just a trifle livelier than the old style ball and it makes a ball that will hold its life right through the game. Taking an old style ball that might stay in play for nine innings we would find it very brisk for the first three, then it would slow up for the next three, and the last third of the game we weren't sure just what was the matter, but we always imagined the players were a little tired. The ball was dead and the game slowed up, but with a cork center ball it stays lively right through.

ADVERTISING TALKS—No. 6

Some mighty big deals are closed at little cost—through the use of a want ad. In this want ad page it is remarkable what a few cents will do. Houses are sold and rented through these columns and many everyday wants are filled by "the little willing workers." A Medford man advertised that he wished to buy a bicycle and had seven presented for his selection. The sale was made, two parties were pleased and the total cost was less than fifty cents. There is no particular moral to all this except that A SMALL DEAL AS WELL AS A LARGE ONE CAN BE BEST MADE THROUGH THE WANT AD.
