MEMORIAL DAY.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS.

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as the final resting place of those who here gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men living and dead who fought here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom and that government of the people, by the people and for the people shall not perish from the earth.

TEDDY TELLS OF GUINEA PIGS AS BRAIN MEASURES

BETTSBURG, Pa., May 30.—Theodore Roosevelt made two addresses here today, one at the memorial day services at the national cemetery and the other to a gathering of railroad engineers. At the cemetery Colonel Roosevelt declared that "we should consecrate ourselves anew to trying practically to apply the issues of today, the spirit of lofty idealism and homely commonsense in which Abraham Lincoln worked". Referring to the civil war Roosevelt said:

"That war could only have been fought by a people showing a mixture of fifty idealism and sound commonsense which is essential to a nation's success, either in peace or war. The war could only have been fought by a people imbued with the highest idealism and commonsense. A true test of a man's worth and the respect in which he should be held is not in the position he holds, but in the way he does his duty in that position."

CITY PAYS A TRIBUTE TO BOYS OF '61

With Fair Weather Prevailing Hundreds Turn Out to Strew Garlands on the Graves of Soldiers and Relatives.

Large Crowd Assembles in City Park to Hear the Excellent Exercises of the Day.

With the American flag flung in the breeze from the staff surmounting the United States weather bureau indicating fair weather Medford today experienced one of the most delightful Memorial days in many years. The mercury ranged about 70 and the sky was without a cloud.

The day was generally observed. The stores in the city closed for the most part at noon to remain closed throughout the day. The streets and business fronts were appropriately decorated and the bustle of a busy workaday world was stilled in respect to those who have gone before and to the boys of '61.

During the morning hours the greater part of the time was spent at the cemetery. Here thousands of garlands were placed upon the graves of dear ones. The cemetery was thronged with townspeople all of them laden with flowers. Many of the last resting places were cleaned up, weeds cut away and generally improved. The cemetery was visited in a body by the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and by the Woman's Relief Corps. They left their hall at 9 o'clock for the cemetery and returned shortly before noon.

This afternoon the veterans and friends gathered at the city park after a parade along Main street. Here a monument to the unknown dead was draped and the address of the afternoon delivered. The park was thronged with people.

During the afternoon ceremonies all of the stores in the city were closed. Some will open late this afternoon but for the most part the day was observed as a holiday.
