MISSOURI FOR TEDDY

from Missouri, practically swept the board. With the exception of the eighth Mississippi district, where the delegation was split, Taft and Roosevelt each being given a delegate, the other contests were decided in favor of the Taft men, they being seated in the second, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh districts.

All the Missouri districts contests were settled by agreement in which Roosevelt got the delegates in four of the ten contested districts and Taft in the other six. Under the terms of the agreement, the entire contest in these districts goes before the trials. This arrangement, while seemingly of benefit to Taft, merely transfers the scene of the fight.

Evidences of an attempt by the Roosevelt and Taft leaders to get together in many of the remaining contests were seen in the compromise in the Missouri district contests.

Just before adjournment, contests from North Carolina districts were considered. In the First District two Roosevelt contesting delegations appeared. The committee decided in favor of delegates Butler and Robinson.

The contest from the Fourth North Carolina District was sent to the foot of the list because of the illness of one of the contestants. In the contest in the Ninth District, which was also between two Roosevelt factions, the committee seated delegates McNich and Greene.

WHITE LIGHT DISTRICTS OF THE COUNTRY HORRIFIED AT NEW DISEASE THAT TURNS WINE OPENERS INTO REAL "TIGHTWADS"

Oligodypsia, or lack of thirst, a newly discovered disease, may devastate the White Light districts throughout the country. Dr. Schmidt, of Berlin, has found twenty-two victims suffering horribly from it in Germany. So insidious and sudden is the malady that it may seize a man unawares, even at the choice table for which he has paid $30 in advance, destroy the desire for rare vintages and despoil his throat.

If you have it you will be able to pronounce it; if you cannot, the chances are still good that you are immune. Oligodypsia is more of a condition than a disease. Once in its clutches the victim feels as though he did not care whether he ever crooked his elbow again in all his life.

CROSSES DIVIDE BY CRATER LAKE ON HORSEBACK

Bill Watkins, a well known mountaineer of southern Oregon arrived in Medford this morning from the Klamath country by way of Arants Canyon Union creek and Prospect being the first man to cross the mountains this year by way of the road to Crater Lake. According to Mr. Watkins the road will not be opened for automobile travel until July. The snow on the summit is from six to eight feet in depth. It is now possible to get as far as Whiskey creek easily with a team but from there to Arants camp the going is very hard. Mr. Watkins made the trip in the early morning when the crust of the snow was sufficient to hold his horse. He did not visit the lake.

"The road to Arants camp on the Klamath side is not difficult to travel on horseback," states Mr. Watkins, "as a trail has been broken out well several making the trip so far. But on this side across the divide it is very deep. I camped at Arants camp, there early in the morning and made Whiskey creek before the crust of the snow softened. I rode a horse accustomed to going in the snow and had no trouble although he broke through several times. It is not exactly what one would call a pleasure trip. The going was easy from Whiskey creek down. At Union creek the snow is all gone. The road did not suffer an appreciable amount during the winter.

"The road being built by the convicts is a splendid one. Machines will bowl along there rapidly this summer."

The place is one of the show alfalfa ranches of this section. Mr. Hickey purchased it about two years ago from T. E. Postinger of this city, who developed the tract. It contained 115 acres of alfalfa under ditch. Mr. Postinger was instrumental in making the deal. Mr. Hickey sold owing to ill health and consequent inability to devote his attention to the place.

Mr. Wood plans to make his home permanently on the place.
