BALTIMORE, June 27.—Wilson stock took a decided boom this afternoon when, on the vote to seat the Wilson delegates from South Dakota Tammany and the ninety New York votes and Roger Sullivan and the 58 Illinois votes took their stand in favor of the New Jersey governor.

As to the reasons for the move it developed that an interesting conference was held last night between Roger Sullivan and the Tammany chieftain, at which the former endeavored to convince the New York leader that the rank and file of the party stands for a progressive candidate.

Corn Fields Heard From

Sullivan held that a deluge of telegrams had poured in on delegates protesting against the vote to make Judge Parker temporary chairman. It is said that Sullivan left Murphy's room without securing the latter's promise to desert Clark, but the action of the New York delegates indicated that Murphy had "seen a light." Prior to the vote on South Dakota went around that the Roger Sullivan delegates who are instructed for Clark, had entered into a compact with the Wilson people by which the latter agreed to vote to seat the Sullivan delegates from Illinois this afternoon in return for a promise from Sullivan to throw the Illinois votes to Wilson after they had complied with their instructions by voting for Clark on the first ballot.

The vote on the South Dakota contest, increasing the progressive lead over that stacked up last night on the vote on the unit rule, gave Wilson supporters a great deal of encouragement and emphasized the earlier statement of Colonel Bryan that there would be no change of attitude on the part of the delegates until "once the cornfields voiced their opinion" on the vote on the temporary chairmanship.

CONTEST FIGHTS DELAY OPENING PAST USUAL HOUR

BALTIMORE, June 27.—Mrs. Tatt, wife of the president, was one of the early arrivals. She was the guest of local friends and was given a seat directly back of the speaker's stands. Many of the wives of the democratic leaders were presented to her while the hall slowly filled. By 11:45 a. m. the galleries were all filled, but fewer than 200 delegates were in their seats.

At 12 o'clock, the hour set for the convention to assemble, Temporary Chairman Parker had not yet put in an appearance. The crowd was the largest of the convention to date and the congestion in the aisles was so great that neither the sergeants-at-arms, nor the police could make any impression on it.

At 12:30 every seat in the building had been filled and scores were standing along the gallery walls in the rear of the hall under the gallery. The firemen on duty were ordered to aid the police in an effort to clear the aisles leading to the exits, but the crowd refused to budge even for these men.

The delay in calling the convention to order was said to be due to an attempt to secure a compromise on the contests, especially those from Illinois and South Dakota.

Champ Clark banners were being planned to many of the state standards. It was known to many of the delegates that the Clark forces desired to make a supreme effort to put their man across on the first ballot. They had rooters placed in the galleries, where they could do the most good when the time came. A Clark picture was attached to the Arkansas state standard, only to be indignantly snatched away by one of the delegates.

A woman in the galleries almost put the convention out of business last night by throwing her shawl over the clock on the outside of the balcony. The convention literally "marked time" until a sergeant-at-arms uncovered the dial.

CLARK'S FOLLOWING IS LARGEST AMONG GALLERY CROWD

BALTIMORE, Md., June 27.—The lengthy session of last night in the torrid atmosphere of the democratic national convention today. Because of a belief that the convention was certain to reach the nominating stage today, the street fairs did a thriving business in flags and pennants. Each delegate armed himself with at least one pennant bearing the name and picture of his favorite candidate, so that, when the time arrived to explode the noise cannons, the crowd would have the ammunition ready.

In addition, big banners were smuggled to the hall and hidden in places where they could easily be produced when the moment came. Clark banners and buttons predominated. There was no denying the speaker's following was larger than any other candidate. A count of noses indicated that even though he should get New York's delegates on the first ballot and the bulk of the other uninstructed delegates, he would be far short of the two-thirds vote necessary to nominate.

In anticipation of a lively as well as a protracted session, the delegates also armed themselves with a goodly supply of noise producing instruments, such as baby rattles, horns and the like.

BRYAN'S FIGHT ALREADY HALF WON

BALTIMORE, Md., June 27.—"The fight is already half won. There is nothing to say about what is left. There have been and there will be things happening, not only every day, but every hour."

Surrounded by a crowd that jammed his rooms to suffocation William J. Bryan today uttered the above defiant declaration when asked to outline his plans for continuing the fight on the Murphy-Taggart-Sullivan combination of conservatives who brought about his defeat for the temporary chairmanship of the democratic national convention.

Bryan had been up since five o'clock. He was without coat, vest, or collar, and the perspiration was running down his face in streams.

But he declared that he intended fighting through the convention, not only for the progressive platform, but for the progressive candidate that he declared the democracy of the country was expecting to have named.

A determined effort was made today by the Wilson men to get Bryan to come out openly for their candidate. He refused and called attention to the fact that he is instructed by the Nebraska democracy to vote for the nomination of Speaker Champ Clark.

But that there is an understanding between the Wilson leaders and the Nebraska is certain. Many of the latter's closest friends are openly wearing Wilson buttons and there is always a hearty welcome at the Bryan rooms for the Wilson boomers.

Bryan was in earnest conversation for some time today with Herman Ridder, of New York; John E. Lamb, of Indiana; Senator Gore, of Oklahoma; Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee; Senator Culbertson of Texas, and a number of others before going to the meeting of the sub-committee on resolutions.

Ridder was reported to have tried to "feel the Commoner out," on the question of candidates but did not receive much information.

With some other persons it was reported that Bryan discussed the plan of certain progressives who are instructed for Clark, to change their votes before the roll call is announced on either the first or second ballots, if New York's ninety votes are cast for Clark.

These delegates, it is understood, say such action by New York would be an admission that the charges that the Clark deal with Murphy on the temporary chairmanship in return for promises of support was well founded.

It is understood that Bryan positively refused to express any opinion regarding the wisdom of such a plan.

"The progressive spirit that sweeps this country is called by some the principles of the progressives; by others the doctrines of the insurgents; but back yonder when a voice in the western wilderness cried out for them, they were called the vagaries of Bryan, the dreamer. However much we may differ in national conventions upon minor questions, all just men must admit that the one living American whose name will shine in history studied by a thousand flaming stars, only behind that of Jefferson and Jackson, is that of William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska."

BALTIMORE, Mr., June 27.—The Montana delegation one of whose members voted against William J. Bryan for temporary chairman of the democratic national convention last Tuesday received the following telegram signed by 100 democrats of Butte this afternoon.

"Wire us the name of the traitor in the Montana delegation, who voted against Bryan so we can have it for future reference. Also tell him not to come home."

BALTIMORE, June 27.—The following is the keynote speech of Senator-Elect Ollie M. James, of Kentucky as permanent chairman of the convention:

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the convention: I am deeply grateful to this great convention of patriotic American democrats for the honor you have bestowed upon me in calling me to preside over your deliberations while you select the next president of the great republic.

"I congratulate the democrats of the nation upon the fortunate auspices under which we have assembled. Here no charge of bribery hovers about this hall; no cry of thief and robber is hurled by one fellow democrat at another. No soldiers stand in reserve to keep us from each other's throats.

"Our deliberations here shall be for the country's good, according to each other's views, believing as I do, that

BALTIMORE, June 27.—As soon as Chairman Parker announced that the minority report had been adopted in the South Dakota contest Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi rose to a point of order, claiming that the Philippines, being no part of the United States, by the decision of the United States supreme court, were therefore not entitled to a vote, they having been recorded in the affirmative.

Williams then moved that the amended report on the South Dakota contest be adopted with the provision incorporated that the Philippine delegates should have no vote. The motion was carried again, establishing once more the democratic contention that the Philippines were not entitled to seats in a democratic convention.

Parker named the following committee to escort Speaker James to the chair: Senator Bankhead of Kentucky, Representative Hughes of New Jersey, Senator Pomerene and Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE CONVENTION

BALTIMORE, Md., June 27.—Mayor Baker of Cleveland who electrified the convention with his speech in opposition to the imposition of the unit rule in primary states, looks about 28 years of age, but he's 40. He got his start in Politics under the late Mayor Tom L. Johnson and served as city attorney under him.

"Honorable" delegates come from only two states—Arkansas and New Jersey—according to the official convention roll. The prefix "Hon." is enjoyed exclusively by the delegates at large from these two state not even a "mistake" being granted in the printed rolls to the scores of senators, representatives and other notables. A few "Doctors" and "Governors" are titles scattered through the roll.

Senator-Elect Vardaman of Mississippi is a nicotine devotee, and his personal habits in that respect clash with the fire regulations at the armory. "Put out the cigar," a fireman curtly snapped at Vardaman as the southerner was enjoying a whiff in the hall. Such a tone as was used by the fireman has been wanted to rouse Vardaman to action, but he meekly obeyed the fireman's order.

The hearing of the contests from the District of Columbia before the credentials committee Wednesday brought out the fact that the democrats of Washington have had some bitter internal fights, although not a man in the District is permitted to vote unless, of course, he goes to his home in one of the states. The election of delegates to the national convention brought out three conventions, one regular, the second a bolt from the first and the third a bolt from the second.

"L" is the lettered designation of the room assigned to the resolutions committee. "This sure is 'L'" remarked a distinguished committee-man yesterday afternoon as he mopped perspiration and panted for air. The room is directly off the main floor, poorly ventilated, close and stuffy. Then the committee has to shut the doors when the bands play.

Samuel Gompers, labor leader, objects strenuously to being touched by police or other officials. He was roughly shoved back from the door of the resolutions committee and told to "move on." "Take your hands off!" yelled Gompers in sudden indignation. "Don't touch me. I'll move on, but you keep your hands off." The official dropped his hands from Gompers who swaggered away in elation over another victory for "personal liberty."
