FIRE SEASON LATE THIS YEAR

The fire season this year will be delayed considerably according to M. L. Erickson supervisor of the Crater National forest, owing to the large amount of moisture which has fallen this month. The season generally opens in earnest by July 1 but owing to rains in the mountains the season is not expected to open until July 15 and probably not to any degree until August. Two years ago when the fires were bad the season opened about July 1 but at that time with a vengeance. They started in several parts of the forest at nearly the same time. Last year they started only occasionally and were controlled before they could spread over any considerable area. This year with more guards on the job the loss should be very small.

WILSON STOCK BOOMING

(Continued from Page One.) N Called to Order At 12:43 Chairman Parker called the convention to order and introduced as the chaplain of the day Rabbi Adolph Guttmacher of Baltimore. As soon as the prayer ended, the minority report of the credentials committee, dealing with the South Dakota contests, was submitted. It recommended the seating of the Wilson delegates instead of the Clark men placed on the roll by the committee.

The mention of Wilson's name in the committee report was the signal for a round of handclapping. Delegate V. C. McCormick, of Pennsylvania, in making the minority report, asked that the delegates refrain from applauding the names of the candidates mentioned. He then reviewed the placing in the field of the three tickets which had fought it out in the South Dakota primary.

The audience was hot and listless and faintly applauded this summing up, but some of the Clark bonhomers insisted upon interrupting McCormick when he mentioned the speaker's name.

"The action of the committee," said McCormick, "is an absolute defiance of the primary law, and reverses the general policy of the last sixteen years, during which we have always claimed that the democratic party stood for majority rule."

Former Governor W. A. McCorkle of West Virginia, led the fight for the majority report.

Wilson Demonstration Before Bell could answer the galleries started a Wilson demonstration. A score of pictures of the New Jersey governor were held up on canvas, and a locomotive cheer started which spread through the galleries like wildfire, and for a few minutes the delegates sat still and let the galleries keep it up.

Parker finally restored order. The question on acceptance of the minority report, sending Wilson delegates, instead of the Clark men as voted by the credentials committee, was ordered.

OLLIE JAMES

Party of the People

"The democratic party is essentially a party of the people, because it is the people. It has fought a long, hard battle, when it seemed the night would never end, and day would never dawn; but the battle in the interest of the rights of the people they have continued to make until we see the common enemy, the once great republican party, divided, distracted and torn apart, while democracy is harmonious and militant.

"There are two records that will be presented to the American people in the coming campaign for their consideration. One is the record of the republican party, with promises betrayed arrogantly, and the other is the record of the democratic party of promises faithfully and honestly kept. The republican party itself recognizing that President Taft had been unfaithful to the great mass of Americans, refused by an honest majority of the convention to nominate him and it was only brought about by the most wholesale and deliberate unseating of delegates honestly elected, that was ever perpetrated in American politics."

James then reviewed the tariff legislation of the democratic house and bitterly arraigned President Taft for his vetoes of the revision bills, declaring that the trusts stood behind the republican party to this end. "President Taft," he continued, "has the lone and singular distinction of being the only president in the life of this republic who ever vetoed bills cheapening clothing to the people, lumber to the homeless and meat and bread to Americans and free farming implements to the toiling farmers. "I believe in the rigid enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law. I would not only proceed against these great monopolies in inequity and when I found them guilty tell them not to do so any more, to divide their army of pillage into separate marauding bands, but I would proceed against them under the criminal statutes and place upon them the felon's stripes. I do not believe that a monopoly can be reasonable, and I would no more give a trust the right to monopolize reasonably than I would give a thief the right to steal reasonably. These trusts must be destroyed.

No Tariff for Trusts

"We are not opposed to big business. We recognize that in a big country there must be big business but we say with all the emphasis of our soul that big business, like little business, must obey the law. We would strike from these trusts every vestige of protection. We would write a tariff law strictly for revenue only, and place the tax first upon the luxuries, and if it did not produce sufficient revenue, then on the comforts of life and lastly, we would lay the burden of taxation upon the necessities of life.

"The republican platform adopted at Chicago upon the tariff and trust questions is a puzzle absolutely meaningless to the American people, but they may rest assured that to this puzzle, the trusts hold the key.

"President Taft did not take time to carry out, but he kicked out Roosevelt's policies. The American people fear he will be as much mistaken in himself as he was in President Taft. If he wants to come with clean hands and a clear conscience, let him join with us and do what ought to have been done four years ago—elect a democratic president.

Joined to Idols

"The president is joined to idols. His administration presents the most melancholy spectacle in all our national life. Repudiated in the middle of his term by the election of a democratic congress, his renomination forced by the wholesale unseating of Roosevelt delegates, he is left-handed in both hands; does everything wrong and most generally on Friday.

Roosevelt undertakes to achieve the presidency, by proclaiming himself the advocate of those policies which he won the presidency by denouncing.

When James declared that while the democrats were trying to pass the wool revision schedule over the president's veto, he saw four members of the cabinet openly lobbying against the democrats, Mrs. Taft sat bolt upright in her seat, her face hard set and plainly displeased with the orator's contentions. James departed materially from his set speech to denounce the trusts.

"Roosevelt says Taft is the friend of the trusts," said James, "and Taft says that Roosevelt is the friend of the trusts. My friends, I believe they both tell the truth."

Roosevelt's Mistake

"I'm for free sugar, because it will take two cents off the cost of every pound of sugar," shouted James, amidst tumultuous scenes. Another burst of applause followed when he continued: "Don't take tainted money, but if you do, have the courage to say you did."

"Roosevelt did not have to go to Africa to find wild beasts," James declared a moment later. "He could have found them right in Wall Street opposing the people.

"I believe Roosevelt is right when he says he made a mistake in picking President Taft for the presidency, but I believe it would be even worse to elect a man who made the mistake for the job" was another of James' epigrams.

The references of James to Bryan started a veritable storm of applause. The cheering began anew, this time from all over the hall, when, with picturesque oratory he paid tribute to Representative Sherwood of Ohio, whose pension bill, he said, had fitly recognized the civil war veterans. The crowd went wild with enthusiasm as he referred to the south's reunion in spirit and feeling with the north. James concluded with a final burst of oratory just as Senator La Follette of Wisconsin came on the platform as an invited guest.

the aisle he was loudly cheered, while the band in the galleries struck up "My Old Kentucky Home."

Representative "Tom" Helfin, who in Washington is known as the "Damon" to James' Pythias, was so proud of his giant Kentucky friend that he could not resist the opportunity of following along behind the regular committee which escorted "Ollie" to the stand, a grin on his face, and his hands working overtime in applause.

The retiring chairman introduced James as "one of the most distinguished of the leaders in American democracy," and when the Kentucky giant's frame towered behind Parker a hearty cheer went up from the floor.

Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania moved that the convention take a recess until 8 o'clock tonight and then begin the nominations of candidates for president. Chairman James declared it carried, after an overwhelming chorus of "ayes" had attested to the majority's will.
