MRS. LOUNSBERRY AROUSES SYMPATHY FROM STRANGERS

The Portland Telegram of Saturday contains the following interview with Mrs. Wells Lounsberry, wife of the Rogue River orchardist who turned train-robber.

Wringing her hands in bitter agony of despair and sobbing out her great love for her erring husband, Mrs. Wells Lounsberry, wife of the daring train robber now lying wounded in a Topeka hospital, protested her unwavering faith in his innocence and her loyalty to him in his grievous trouble, at the Union Depot this morning. The frail little creature with two sweet-faced little boys, George and Phillip, aged 6 and 3 tugging at her dress as she hastened frantically about the Union Depot making arrangements for her journey to her husband's side, gave way to frequent paroxysms of weeping and her sad predicament aroused the universal sympathy of the hurrying bustling depot crowds and employees. She had passed a sleepless night on her way from Medford where she took the first train as soon as she had heard of her husband's straits.

Collapses at Depot And, when she found there was a possible chance to catch the fast Overland Limited train over the O. W. R. & N. she begged and pleaded with everybody in range of her voice to help her and her babies catch the train. The conductor was appealed to and said there might be a chance if she would hurry, as considerable mail had to be shifted, but just as she reached the ticket window and begged the clerk to hurry as fast as he could, the Overland pulled out. A depot employe touched her on the shoulder and told her it was too late. Thereupon she collapsed and fell into another series of hysterical sobs. There were grown men, hardened to pathetic scenes around the grim old depot, who brushed tears from their eyes as they saw the suffering woman's plight.

As luck would have it, the 10:30 Northern Pacific train which makes close connections all the way through, was almost ready to start and Mrs. Lounsberry was consoled when she found that she would lose only a few hours by taking that train. Her story is one in which overpowering love sweeps every other consideration before it. Her only thought, her one overwhelming longing is to be at her husband's side, no matter what befalls him.

"Be Merciful to Us" When a Telegram man assisted her from belated No. 14 from the south this morning, and she realized he was a newspaperman, she seized him by the arm and exclaimed with tears in her eyes:

"Please, please be merciful to us. Be as good to me and my little boys as you can. He couldn't have done it. It's too horrible to think of. It is unbelievable. How soon does the next train go? Won't you please help me? I must get to his side. He needs me now more than he ever did in his life and I must be there to help him fight his battles.

"Tell me, do you think they will take him away from me? Don't tell me any bad news. If you know anything that is hopeful; anything that makes it look a little brighter for him, please don't keep it from me. Oh, God knows how I love my poor dear boy. He knows it, and I know he will tell me he is innocent. I know he is innocent. He never, never could have done such a thing unless—and here she shook her head and moaned—"unless he was out of his mind. Whatever his troubles are, my place is with him."

Tells of Life of Toit The first shock to her came when she found she wouldn't reach Topeka before next Tuesday morning.

"Why, why is it so far, and why do the trains run so slow?" were other exclamations showing the pitiful hysteria of the pale, tired and haggard looking woman.

In a half-incoherent, disconnected way, Mrs. Lounsberry told how she and her husband had worked so hard to get ahead, how kind and loving he had always been and how that made the blow all the more grievous to endure.

"He left home a little over two weeks ago," she explained, "saying he was going to visit some friend he had in Denver, with whom he was going to take up a business proposition in which there would be a good deal of money for him. He wrote me long and affectionate letters every day. I got the last letter from him after I had heard this awful, awful news about him. I wired to Denver and to Topeka to him, but I got no answer, and in the face of all the bitter news that has come, I can scarcely believe that my husband is the one they have taken.

"What do you think they will do to him, and have you heard if he is hurt badly?" The more statement that his wounds were not serious and that he would recover, cheered the half-demented wife and she talked more rationally.

To Protect Children "I don't care anything for myself, but I must shield and protect these two little darlings," and she patted George and Phillip on the head. And they don't know the cause or reason for their mother's exquisite sorrow and grief. They only know they are on a long train ride and that they are going to see their "daddy," and for some reason or other their mamma feels very bad and cries a good deal.

Mrs. Lounsberry and the two little boys will reach Topeka next Tuesday morning. She has wired her husband's two brothers, George and Fred Lounsberry to meet her at Topeka upon her arrival there. As she seated herself in the train for Topeka, she again begged that the public be kind to her and her babies and that the papers be merciful to her husband. She does not know yet that her husband has confessed that he shot himself trying to commit suicide, or that he confessed to the Red Bluff train robbery of last January.

On Tuesday, August 20, the first meeting of the Southern Oregon Equal Suffrage League was held in Grants Pass.

It was made a gala occasion by a reception tendered by the Grants Pass club to the Southern Oregon President Mrs. Bess Gunion Conklin and the presidents and secretaries of the local clubs.

Luncheon was served at twelve-thirty to the guests at the residence of Mrs. Conklin and a program for the afternoon arranged.

At two-thirty all repaired to the Commercial Club parlors which had been handsomely decorated with banners and flowers of the suffrage color.

The following ladies were in the receiving line: Mrs. Robert G. Smith, Mrs. Bess Gunion Conklin, Mrs. John F. Reddy, Mrs. William Hale, Dr. Mattie B. Shaw, Mrs. C. B. Lankin, Mrs. C. H. Woodward, Mrs. George R. Riddle, Miss Gladys Heard, Mrs. Ida M. Gard, Mrs. S. Loughridge, Mrs. Chas. Schieffelin, Mrs. Edward H. French, Mrs. M. M. Edmonds.

When all the visitors had arrived the program was opened with a piano solo by Miss Bernice Quinton. Mrs. A. W. Bartlett, president of the Grants Pass club, gave an address of welcome. Dr. Mattie B. Shaw responded on behalf of the Ashland club and described the work already accomplished there. Mrs. John F. Reddy responded for Medford and told of the many objections made by Anti's and their manifest contradictions. Mrs. Chas. Schieffelin described the methods in use by her organization committee and the success with which the committee's work was crowned.

Miss Gladys Heard ably handled the subject of "Ways and Means of Raising the Sinews of War." Mrs. C. B. Lankin of Ashland defined Equal Suffrage. Mrs. W. C. Hale of Grants Pass who has just returned from New York, told of the Suffrage there. Mrs. Bess Gunion Conklin explained the object of the Southern Oregon League and urged the three clubs to co-operate in their work.

Mrs. C. F. Clements, Grants Pass attorney, showed the disabilities under which women labor in Oregon and what the ballot would do to correct them.

This closed the afternoon's program and the League adjourned to meet in Ashland on September 4th. Mrs. A. W. Bartlett made an excellent presiding officer and all the club took care to see that the visitors had a most delightful time.

NEW WAREHOUSE WILL BE ERECTED FRONT AND 11TH

Plans for a two-story brick warehouse on south Front street have been prepared by the Rogue River Commission company, and as soon as they are finally approved, work will start on the erection of the new building which is to be modern in every respect. The building will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

In addition to the two floors a full basement will be constructed. Freight elevators will be installed with all devices adding to the convenience and completeness of the plant.

The Rogue River Commission company has increased its business to a great extent during the past year which led them to discuss the feasibility of erecting the new building. When work starts it will be rushed and the building completed before winter.

Fine Show at Isis. The Isis Theater Sunday evening introduced to Medford patrons the Olivia Trio, dramatic singers and musicians of ability. Their act runs with the smoothness of experienced artists and makes a big hit. ROOSEVELT ASKS FOR RIGHT TO TESTIFY OYSTER BAY, Aug. 26.—The text of the two letters of Roosevelt to Cortelyou about the Standard Oil contribution have been made public. The letter dated October 26, 1904, says the writer had been informed the Standard Oil contributed $100,000, and asks that the money, if already received, be returned. "In returning the money I wish it made clear to them there is not the slightest feeling against them, and that they may count upon being treated exactly as well by the administration as if we had accepted the contribution. They shall not suffer in any way because we have refused it. Just as they should not have gained in any way if we had accepted it, but I am not willing that it be accepted and must ask Mr. Blinn to return it."

In commenting upon Archbold's testimony, Colonel Roosevelt said tonight: "It is a most unheard-of thing that Mr. Archbold should depart for Europe without testifying about the $25,000 he gave Senator Penrose. It is a most peculiar thing the committee should allow him to depart without testifying. There are no dead men concerned in that transaction. I do not want a day more than necessary to elapse without placing on record my testimony."

The report that Archbold before calling from New York intimated he might ask Roosevelt for libel was mentioned.
