GET SUNDAY MAIL MONDAY MORNING

Owing to a provision attached to the postoffice appropriation act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, there will be no mail distributed to lock boxes in the local postoffice between midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday, except in cases where important mail is expected and an appeal is made to the postmaster. Hotels and newspapers have also been excepted by a ruling of the Postmaster-general.

The law provides "That hereafter postoffices of the first and second classes shall not be open on Sundays for the purpose of delivering mail to the general public, but this provision shall not prevent the prompt delivery of special delivery mail."

Protests followed the passage of this law so rapidly that Postmaster-General Hitchcock issued this explanation: Mail received up to midnight on Saturday for lock boxes will be distributed and will be available on Sunday as usual.

"There is at present no street delivery on Sunday and therefore the law makes no changes in this regard. In short, the only mail that will be affected under a reasonable construction of the new law is that received at the postoffices on Sunday and distributed on that day for distribution to lock boxes.

"As the purpose of the law, which was clearly enacted in the interest of the employees, is to reduce as far as practicable the amount of Sunday labor, the work of distributing Sunday mail to lock boxes will be limited to certain classes of mail that cannot be held until Monday morning without serious inconvenience to the addressees.

"This mail will include that for newspapers and for hotel guests. The latter is peculiarly transient in character and should not be delayed. This mail, like the special delivery mail, will be sorted out at the offices of despatch on the railway mail trains in order to simplify the work of distribution.

"Under the new method its distribution to the boxes on Sunday will be hastened rather than delayed.

"In order to give the new law as liberal a construction as possible, postmasters will be instructed on application to have their employees sort out in emergency cases on Sundays letters of special importance.

"This provision does not require the closing of postoffices on Sunday which will be quite impossible, owing to the fact that the transit mail has to be sorted and also the mail collected in cities for dispatch to other destinations. To stop the movement of this mail would mean a serious clogging of the whole system of mail transportation and consequent inconvenience to the public."

The new order will go into effect at the local postoffice next Sunday.
