Author of Hiawatha Dead

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, author of the song "Hiawatha," which made a great hit some years ago, is dead here today. He was 73 years of age.

The Massachusetts legislature has enacted a law regulating the hours of labor of street railway employes after January 1, 1913. Regular trainmen will be limited to nine hours regular work, to be performed within twelve consecutive hours. For substitutes eight hours must elapse between the close of one day's labor and the beginning of the next.

Two new British battleships will be fitted with anti-rolling tanks, the first war craft so equipped.

GRAND JURY PROBES VICE IN PORTLAND

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 3.—While Governor West enjoyed at Salem a brief respite from his arduous labors in the vice crusade, the September grand jury, the body before which will be presented all the evidence gathered by the governor's lieutenants, was drawn here today. The moral campaign was expected to be in full swing tomorrow.

H. M. Esterly, special prosecutor for the state, announced today that he would go before Judge McGinn in the circuit court late this afternoon or tomorrow and ask him to instruct the new grand jury specifically that he (Esterly) has the right to conduct the deliberations at that body. Judge McGinn was expected to issue these instructions as he had previously decided both Esterly and District Attorney Cameron should have the right to appear as prosecuting officers before the grand jury.

EDITOR GARRETSON OF JUDGE PASSES AWAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Carlton Garretson, editor of Judge is dead here today from injuries received when he was thrown from his horse May 10 last. OHIO WOMEN BUSY AT POLLS

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 3.—Undaunted by a heavy downpour, Cleveland suffragettes, "wet to the skin," worked at the polling stations all day long today, and won many converts to the cause. The voters of the state are balloting on 42 proposed changes in the constitution, one of which would give the ballot to women. Secretary Gongwer of the board of elections declared this afternoon that he never saw an old party organization operate so effectively as the women here worked today. Gongwer said they deserved to win.

In addition to woman suffrage, some of the most important questions to be decided are the initiative and referendum, good roads, taxation, the minimum wage and a change in the judicial system.
