

SHERMAN'S DEATH EXPECTED NOW AT ANY TIME

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Although a slight improvement was announced this morning in the case of James Schoolcraft Sherman, vice-president of the United States who is critically ill at his home here suffering from bright's disease. No forecast as to the outcome of his disease from Dr. F. H. Peck, Sherman's personal physician. The bulletin today indicated that, although there was some change for the better, the death of the vice president at any time would not be surprising.

At noon Vice President Sherman was resting comfortably, while his physicians held a consultation as to his case.

EX-SENATOR FULTON TALKS TO CROWD OF ABOUT 200

Ex-Senator Charles W. Fulton addressed a crowd of 200 on Haymarket square in this city last Saturday afternoon during which he pled for the re-election of President Taft and for the re-appointment of Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., independent candidate for re-election. Mr. Fulton spoke in the open air and at some length.

Mr. Fulton devoted the greater portion of his remarks to Senator Bourne whom he attacked bitterly. He used the stock arguments of the anti-Bourne forces throughout.

CUMMINGS ADMITS

The whereabouts of the money is proving a stickler in the case. Seymour declares that when the three of them were at the south end of Grape street that Dedaskalos appeared to be afraid of him. "Every time I would creep up on him he would get on his feet," he declared Monday afternoon in going over the ground accompanied by the officers. "He would not let me get close enough to hit him. Mike didn't have the courage at that place. Again he was afraid to go into the dark hole on South Front street with Mike saying that he had too much money. It's a good thing he didn't for I went in first and was laying for him with my club."

Regained His Courage
"After he had left me for a few moments near the depot he seemed to be no longer afraid of me," continued Seymour, "and this led me to believe that Dedaskalos either gave the money to Mike or cashed it somewhere. One thing is certain I didn't get any money out of the deal."

Spanos insists that he did not have a club with him and that Seymour alone had a club. Seymour states that the club found by him in the rear of the Seattle rooming house is his and on Monday he told the officers where to go and find Spanos' club. Spanos previously positively identified the club found at the Seattle as Seymour's but failed to say anything regarding his own. This was probably due to the fact that he claims that Seymour did the killing while he was forced to assist.

First Degree for Two

Whether the authorities will be able to convict Cummings as an accomplice or not is a question but Spanos and Seymour are almost certain to be convicted of first degree murder.

"I realized the jig was up after I had my first hearing," stated Seymour "and I made up my mind not to let that yellow Greek get away so I told the truth of the matter. I am willing to take my medicine but I don't intend that Spanos shall make me the goat."

TABLE ROCK

R. C. Washburn finished picking apples on Saturday and will begin packing today, Monday.

Potato digging has been somewhat delayed on account of rain. This community will have perhaps seven or eight thousand sacks.

The Washburn orchards will probably pack from 15,000 to 17,000 boxes of apples and the small orchards together will pack around 2000 boxes.

Mrs. G. E. Walling and Miss Maudaline returned on Saturday from a two weeks sojourn at Klamath hot springs.

Two Table Rock boys emptied their guns at a buck on Sunday morning at a distance of about fifty feet and then the deer walked away. They tried to set their dogs on it which resulted in a savage dog fight.

A good sized crowd gathered at the school house on Saturday evening to listen to a prohibition lecture, but the speaker failed to put in an appearance. One of the school girls took the stage and kept the house roaring with laughter for half an hour with stories and puns.

Mrs. Harriet Loft who spent part of the summer with her sister, Mrs. G. E. Walling of Table Rock, writes from her home at Williams Bay Wis., that she encountered heavy snow on her journey home and that she did not know how to estimate Oregon till she left it. She will dispose of her property which amounts to considerable and will return here to live as soon as possible.

We hear that Mr. S. C. Collins has sold a part of his ranch to Chicago people.

There will be a literary program at Table Rock Saturday evening.

EAGLETS ABROAD.

By A. C. Howlett

The last time I wrote I promised to tell the readers of the Mail Tribune something of what I saw and heard in Pendleton. I arrived in Pendleton on the evening of the 11th of October after enjoying a delightful ride from Hood River, a partial description of which I gave in my last. On my arrival at Pendleton the first thing that greeted my ears was a call for passengers to ride to the different hotels in the city, but I had my mind made up to go to the Bowman, so paid little attention to the invitation to take a free ride to a stopping place for the night. After securing a room and calling up my daughter, Mrs. Lewis, on the phone I started out to see the city. Pendleton is a thriving city of about five thousand inhabitants, situated on the Umatilla river at an elevation of 1170 feet and is the county seat of Umatilla county, and one would think to see the throngs of men on the streets that it was a city of at least ten thousand. There seems to be a vast amount of business done here as it is situated in the center of one of the finest grain belts on the coast, and there are short railroads running out from the city in several different directions. In addition to that there are hundreds of teams coming in from almost every direction loaded with grain of all kinds for the farmers do not confine themselves to raising wheat but there is a vast amount of oats and barley raised here, and some of the land is very productive, yielding in some instances as high as one hundred bushels of barley to the acre, and on a part of the Umatilla reservation the wheat yield averages forty bushels to the acre, but I will have more to say on that subject when I give my writeup of my trip to Eastland. Pendleton is emphatically a wet town or city. The first door I came to on my way to the hotel was a saloon, and on inquiry found that the city had only twelve saloons in it—that beats Medford for if I remember right Medford has twelve saloons and ten thousand inhabitants, while Pendleton has only five thousand. But while they have twelve saloons they also have several fine churches and schools, a woolen mill, two large flouring mills, iron foundry, two different railway systems and several other branches of industry that help to keep up a city. The streets are broad and in fine condition and the business portion of the city contains some very fine buildings and everything in and around the city shows that it is in a prosperous condition.

I was told by one of the advocates of the saloon that they are strictly regulated, that they are not allowed to have any chairs or tables, no back entrance, no screens, not opened over four feet above the sidewalk as it is in Medford, but absolutely open for the inspection of all passers, and are required to close at eleven o'clock at night and kept closed from Saturday night to Monday morning, and that the saloon keepers would not sell any liquor at all on Sunday, but I took that part with a grain of allowance.

They also have a fine hospital in the city that is said to compare with any in the state. They have a flourishing Catholic school that shows up to good advantage to passengers passing along the railroad. They have a very wide steel bridge across Umatilla river, so arranged as to accommodate all the travel both in vehicles or on foot for they have wide passages for footmen on each side of the main bridge. I don't know as I ought to try to say anything with regard to the Round-up as I was not here at the time but from what I can learn it was not only a Round-up but a hold-up as well for I am told that sleeping places were so scarce that anything like a bed would command a price from one dollar up to as high as five dollars a night, and in some instances men paid as much as one or two dollars for the privilege of sleeping on the floor. The moral effect of the Round-up is against the city for it is looked upon as a rendezvous for all of the toughs, and in conversation with several of the business men was told that while the Round-up brought a vast amount of money to the city, that the reaction is being felt and they seem to doubt whether it will eventually help the city. But I must close for this time. The next time will tell about my trip to Pilot Rock and a general description of the country.

Pilot Rock, Oct. 22, 1912.

When I closed my last letter to the Mail Tribune I promised to tell something about the town of Pilot Rock and the country surrounding it, but before I commence to tell about the town I wish to say something about my trip from Pendleton to this place, for at this writing I am at the farm of my granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. McGowan, situated about five miles from Pilot Rock. The train that I was to take on Saturday morning Oct. 12, from Pendleton to Pilot Rock was about an hour late and during that time I had nothing to do but simply wait, the most undesirable task I have to perform when I am traveling, but finally everything was in readiness and I started. The first five miles on the route was a retracing of the route of the evening before so there was nothing new to note, simply going down a coolye, that is the name given to the deep hollows in this country, they are simply ravines and are generally bounded on each side by rocky sides giving a solid foundation for the railroad track, and I discovered that most of the railroads are built on these places on account of the general soil being so soft that it is difficult to make a solid road bed. After passing Pilot Junction we started on the branch road that leads to this place and we soon began to see some small farms, but they appeared to be very productive, for in addition to the immense stacks of hay I could see from the car window there seemed to be a bountiful supply of fruit and vegetables of most all kinds. The train is like the Pacific & Eastern train, an accommodation train, and will stop wherever one wishes to get on or off so that I had a good chance to see about all there was to see along the route. There are but two stopping places on the time table between Pendleton and this place, a distance of nineteen miles, but there are several small farms on the route, any they show that the country is quite productive for the houses have the appearance of neatness. The reader will notice that I did not mention anything about the barns for they are generally, not so inviting for where they have any at all, they are simply makeshifts, shacks that will protect the work horses from the inclement weather, and the hay stands out in the weather and is covered with chaff to keep the rain and snow from penetrating the hay, for from what I can learn in this country the winters are clear and cold with but little rain. On my arrival at the station I found my daughter, Mrs. James M. Lewis, waiting for me and we were soon on the road to the hotel for dinner.

The town of Pilot Rock is situated at the end of the railroad track at an elevation of 1815 feet, having raised, in traveling nineteen miles, 745 feet. It seems to be a thriving little village of town and there seemed to be considerable business going on as there was eighty took dinner at the hotel where we ate and at the other hotel they were crowded with guests, but at this time of the year there is a great number of people hauling grain to the depot and warehouses as I am now in the grain belt of Oregon. They had a fire here about a year ago and it burned up quite a number of the old wooden buildings and the result is that many of the buildings present a neat, clean appearance. They have one saloon and I saw a sign Near Beer on a dilapidated shack that looked as though they were about out of business. They have a neat frame church building and are also building another of stone, but I did not learn what denominations were here, they have two general merchandise stores and a hardware

Pretty Mothers

Health is the foundation of all good looks. The wise woman realizes this and takes precautions to preserve her health and strength through the period of child bearing. She remains a pretty mother by avoiding as far as possible the suffering and dangers of such occasions. This every woman may do through the use of Mother's Friend. This is a medicine for external application and so penetrating in its nature as to thoroughly lubricate every muscle, nerve and tendon involved during the period before baby comes. It aids nature by expanding the skin and tissues, relieves tenderness and soreness, and perfectly prepares the system for natural and safe motherhood. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers, which contains much valuable information.

store, a drug store, meat market, blacksmith shop, feed stable, two hotels, etc., and are putting in a water system, and are also building a large two story brick for a mercantile establishment. The town has a thrifty appearance and is surrounded by a rich farming country. But I find that I am at the end of my allotted space in writing and have not told of my trip out to my present stopping place. But will, in my next try to tell of the country around here and out east of Pendleton in the neighborhood of Adams.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pain, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in gualacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula. This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Why Do Such Artists as Mme. Galski Use Steinway Pianos?

Because they have the ability to recognize quality.
