INSPECTION OF ANIMALS ASKED BY WESTERLUND

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 23.—A bill today introduced in the house by Representative Westerlund provides that all animals to be slaughtered for sale as food must first be inspected. If they are found to be afflicted with any disease their slaughter for food is prohibited.

Section 1. The state board of health is hereby authorized and required to appoint in each county of the state, a county meat inspector, whose duty it shall be to inspect all animals to be slaughtered and sold for human consumption as food, and which county meat inspector may appoint deputies in the various parts of his county where it is impracticable for him to make the inspection personally, which deputies shall have the same authority as their principal in making such inspections, and they shall report at least once each month to the county meat inspector as to all animals inspected by them.

Each county meat inspector and his deputies shall provide themselves with record books, in which they shall record the age, species, brand and color of all animals inspected by them, and such other facts as are required by the rules of the state board of health, and killed for the purpose of sale to the public, either at wholesale or retail, in any incorporated city or town in Oregon.

Must Be Inspected

Section 2. It shall be the duty of all persons slaughtering any domestic animals for public sale and use, as fresh meat, other than those inspected by the United States meat inspectors, to notify the county inspector or his deputies, of their intention so to do, and the county inspector, or his deputies, shall at once proceed to inspect the animals designated by the person owning or having the same in charge, and if he shall find that they are affected, or infected with any disease which will render them unfit for human food, he shall inform the person owning or having them in charge not to slaughter the same, but should said animals be found to be free from all disease, he shall issue and give to such owner or person in charge of such animals, a certificate of inspection for each of such animals, stating that he has inspected the same, and that such animal is free from all disease, and he shall keep a record of all animals so inspected, showing those for which certificates of inspection were issued and those for which certificates were denied.—all such animals so inspected for sale, or use as fresh meat, shall be slaughtered within ten days of such inspection. Any person offering the meat of any animal for sale, without having the same inspected as aforesaid, and which is not inspected by the United States officials, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $10.00, nor more than $50.00, for every animal so unlawfully slaughtered. The inspector or his deputy who makes the inspection, shall be entitled to a fee of 25 cents per head for cattle, including veal, and 10 cents per head for hogs, sheep, and goats, to be paid by the person having the inspection made.

Reports to be Made

Section 3. Each of said deputy inspectors shall, at least once each month, report all inspections made by him to the county inspector, giving such information as shall be required by the rules of the state board of health. Each county inspector shall report not less than once each month to the state board of health, covering all inspections made by himself and his deputies, since the last report, furnishing such information as shall be required by the rules of the board. A failure to make these reports by any inspector, or deputy inspector, shall be sufficient cause for his dismissal by the board of inspectors appointing him. No person who is engaged in the business of butchering animals for sale for food, or in any way interested in the sale of meat, shall be eligible to serve as a county or deputy inspector.

The state veterinarian in his capacity as ex-officio member of the state board of health, shall act as state supervisor of all meat inspectors, and shall assist and instruct the county inspectors and their deputies in discharging the duties in their respective offices. The state board of health shall make such rules and regulations respecting the inspection of animals to be slaughtered and sold for food, as shall conduce to the protection of the public health, which rules shall be binding upon all inspectors and all persons slaughtering any animals for human food. When any inspector or deputy inspector is required to travel a distance of more than two miles to inspect any animal or animals for slaughter, he may charge the person owning or having in possession, such animal or animals, ten cents per mile, one way, for such distance traveled in excess of the said two miles, and shall have the right to refuse to make such inspection unless his mileage is paid as above set forth.
