A feature of the La Greeque line is the thigh reducing model.

When fashion decreed that hips must go the ordinary corset was taken in and flattened to give the desired effect, but being simply made smaller on the hips the flesh had to go somewhere and bulged out below the corset and prominent flesh below corset lines became smart women's despair, because there seemed no way either of curing or avoiding it.

All sorts of devices were tried but it remained for La Greeque Corset to be made in a practical, durable, moderate priced model that equalizes the flesh, giving the desired straight unbroken lines from bust to knee.
