

DARROW JURY FAILS TO AGREE

Eight for Conviction, Four for Acquittal—Case Will Be Retried—March 31 Set as Date for Rehearing—Darrow Disappointed

DARROW'S STATEMENT.
"Upon the evidence I should have been acquitted at once.
"My innocence has been firmly established twice, but there were some men on the jury who would have voted to convict me even if they had not heard a word of the evidence.
"I will stay here and fight as long as is necessary. I can keep going as long as Fredericks can, and I hear he is going after me again.
"Well, I'm here; and my friends are with me. I wasn't acquitted, but I'm still able to fight."

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 8.—After deliberating thirty-eight hours and forty minutes the jury that tried Clarence S. Darrow on a charge of bribing Robert F. LIVES RUINED BY SMALL WAGES

Starvation Pay of Mail Order and Department Stores Drove Employers Promise Co-operation

CHICAGO, March 8.—Driven to enter a white slave resort by the impossibility of living on $4 a week, "E. G." told to the senate "starvation wages" probers here in executive session, a story on hell on earth in the white slave dens which made the committee pale with horror. "E. G." today is in a church hospital a wreck. She was carried into the committee's room almost helpless and testified that when her husband died, leaving her with a child to support, hunger forced her into a life of shame.

Get List of Suicides.
The probers today asked the coroner for a list of women suicides who ended their lives because they were unable to obtain employment. These cases are to be exhaustively examined so far as possible to trace them.
Lieutenant Governor O'Hara today personally appealed to a group of employers waiting to testify to lead their aid toward the passage of a law providing a minimum wage of $12 weekly for all women workers in Illinois. Some promised to do so.

Admits the Truth.
"I don't know the exact relation but I believe the girls will sell themselves rather than starve."
Hillman said he employs 1817 girls at an average weekly wage of $8.71. Of these, 23 girls, he said, get $3.50, $4 and $5. Others holding positions below that of saleswomen get $6. Most of the $3.50 girls, he said, were employed at the request of their parents.

As the employers of these girls, Hillman said, "I feel a moral responsibility. We have social workers and a woman doctor to visit the girls and to see to their health."
Hillman said he had discharged immoral floorwalkers and had had their names listed so they could not obtain employment at any other department store. He declared no worthy girl could be held down because one of her superiors disliked her and denied positively that girls are blacklisted at the local stores if they offend their employers.

Promises Cooperation.
Hillman accepted the suggestion of O'Hara and promised to employ investigators on Monday to learn the truth of statements made by the girls seeking employment. He thought that from $8 to $9 a week was sufficient to support a girl but refused to answer any questions as to the profits of his store.
At this Senator Juul said: "If you employers do not help us to find a solution of the social evil some worse means will be used."

Former Secretary of War Stimson was among the witnesses testifying today. He told the committee that the law prevented his using regular troops to clear the streets and said he stretched his authority when he finally ordered a troop of cavalry from Fort Meyer to restore order.
General Anson Mills, one of the marchers in the parade, characterized the crowd as a "sneering gathering of hoodlums" which the police made no effort to rebuke.

AKIN APPEALS FOR FAIR PLAY

To the Editor:
As the father of Delass Akin, who was written up in your yesterday's issue as a very bad boy based upon charges of assault upon Grace Savage with intent to commit rape, I wish to ask the public to withhold judgment until both sides of the case have been heard in the courts. The boy is 16 years of age, and so as I know had not developed vicious tendencies. I am slow to believe that he is as bad as made out by the statement of the prosecuting witness. The boy assures me that, so far as being criminal in the matter is concerned, he is innocent, and I believe him.
As to the charge that he outraged the 12 (14) year old sister, it is wholly without foundation of fact and the charges filed against him will also prove equally groundless, I am sure.
F. D. AKIN.
