LARGE CROWD AT GRADUATION

Although the class of 1913 of St. Mary's academy consisted of only one graduate of the academic department, and but two of the junior department of music, the commencement exercises at the assembly hall last night were both elaborate and enjoyable. Miss Maud Newbury was the graduate of the academic department, and she and Miss Irene M. Sullivan graduated from the musical department.

The program was conducted on a beautifully decorated stage. On the background was a wall of Papa Gontier roses, the class flower, and green palms and ferns made the place a perfect bower. Rev. J. M. O'Neil gave the address of the evening, and presented the diplomas.

Rev. O'Neil spoke of the great value of education. He told how it widened a person's character, made one happier, and more fitted to meet the problems of life.

He spoke of the credit due the sisters of the academy for their splendid educational work, and the greatness of their sacrifice in devoting their lives to it. He finished with the quotation:

"Honor and shame from no condition rise,
Act well your part. Therein all honor lies."

The chorus consisted of twenty-four girl students of the academy, clothed in white, offering a pleasant contrast to the red wall of roses back of them.

The program, principally music, was made up of selections from the masters, all of which were splendidly given. From the first soft strains of the Intermezzo, Cavalleria Rusticana, the first number to the close of Chopin's Polonaise Militaire, every minute was enjoyed by the large audience.

Miss Newbury is a young lady with many friends, and an excellent student. She has been a student of the academy for nine years, and the sisters of the institution say that her graduation will mean a great loss to them. She has a beautiful character and a charming personality. Miss Sullivan, who is a graduate of the music department, had also a host of friends that were present at the commencement.

The personal of the chorus was as follows: Soprano I. Catherine Catherine Deuel, Annette Wakeman, Helena Le Roy, Winifred Hanratty, Bess Weaver, Lucille Smock, Blanche Atwood, Olive Hogan, Florence Reddy, Mabel Scudder, Grace Dewese, Mary Phillips, Ruth Curtis. Soprano II. Ilau Brown, Bernice Brown, Madeline Gagan, Letha Halin, Anna White, Chloe Rockhill, Leona Sweat, Katherine Emig, Alto I. Irene Sullivan, Catherine O'Connell, Gladys Wilson, Maude Newbury, Helen Reddy.

THE ELKS TO CELEBRATE THEIR FLAG DAY

In commemoration of the founding of the American flag, the Elks lodge will hold appropriate exercises at the Page theater next Saturday, June 14. Attorney A. E. Reames will deliver the principal address, and the beautiful ritual of the B. P. O. E. will be presented. The exercises are authorized by an act of congress as a token of patriotism to the birth of the Stars and Stripes.

For this day the Elks make especial effort, and every member of the order and all others are invited to attend the services. The G. A. R., National Guards, Boy Scouts and other organizations will take part. It is requested that every business house display a flag on this day and every auto owner float one from his machine. Appropriate music will also be a part of the Elks program.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL CAMPAIGN.

MOST commendable is the action of the Greater Medford club in inaugurating a rose planting campaign to make Medford the real city beautiful. A beginning will be made by having a rose show in connection with the Fourth of July celebration, following which the city will be districted, active workers named for each section, and systematic effort be made to secure the co-operation of residents. Two rose planting days will be named, one for the fall and one for the spring, and it is hoped by next year to have miles of curbing planted to fragrant roses.

Nowhere does the rose grow to greater perfection than in the Rogue river valley—not even in Portland. Nearly all varieties grow vigorously and flower profusely. From May until December bloom adorns the bushes. Few diseases trouble the rose, which with but little attention, makes many a barren spot beautiful.

In neglecting the beautification of Medford, we are neglecting a natural asset. Streets should be lined with shade trees and curbs with roses. Both add immensely to the attractiveness of the community.

Nothing is more repellent to the homeseeker than neglected lawns, treeless and shrubless streets. They add a disconsolate, woe-begone and hard-times aspect to the locality. They reflect an unprogressive and slipshod spirit that keeps the stranger away.

There is no reason why Medford should not be the most beautiful of cities. The soil will grow anything and an abundant water supply removes the lest vestage of excuse for failure to make the most of opportunity.

The beautification campaign should not stop with the city. A few trees and rose bushes, a little lawn, will add immensely to the attractiveness of the farm house and amply repay the little care.

A SATISFACTORY APPOINTMENT.

THE appointment of Will G. Steel as superintendent of the Crater Lake Park is highly satisfactory to all sections of Oregon. No one could have been named who so deserves recognition. The only wonder is that it was not made long ago.

Crater Lake is a part of Will Steel's life. For upwards of 30 years he has labored in its behalf—and the labor was one of love. To his single handed efforts is due the creation of the national park and the exploitation of Oregon's greatest natural wonder.

Year after year Mr. Steel has devoted his time, energy and money to the lake and its development. Congress after congress he has lobbied in its behalf. Administrations have come and gone, and each one found Mr. Steel insistent upon recognition of the park.

Now that his life time efforts have been crowned with success, now that the government is spending nearly a million in park improvements, now that highways are being constructed to it and railroads approaching it, what more fitting than that Mr. Steel be selected to aid in its development, in a position where he can do much to enhance its attractiveness.

Senator Chamberlain and Lane are to be congratulated in stepping outside party lines and naming the man of all men best fitted for the place.

Turn Out for School Election

To the Editor:

May I call your attention to the fact that there is no more important day in the year, as far as our state is concerned, than the Annual School Meeting day, which occurs this year on the 16th day of June? The people get in any form of government about what they demand, and if only three or four people attend the Annual School Meeting, it shows that their demand is lacking. School officers and teachers become discouraged and, as a consequence, poor results follow.

May I ask you to publish an editorial calling attention especially to the Annual School Meeting, and asking that the whole population go to the school house, look into conditions and make plans for the year? I find that some districts have much better schools than others, although they spend but little, if any more, money. It is not all a question of expenditure; it is a question of looking after things and having the right kind of co-operation. Members of the school board of the state receive no pay, and are very seldom thanked for what they do.

A few schools last year made much of the Annual School Meeting day; took time to look over their property, suggest improvements, and plan for the future. In each of those districts conditions improved at once. I am sure a man or woman who attends the Annual School Meeting and does his duty, will feel more like celebrating on the Fourth of July.

I assure you that your co-operation in this matter will be appreciated. Very sincerely yours,
L. R. ALDERMAN,
Supt. Public Instruction.

To Eradicate Chickweed From Lawns

The common Chickweed (Stellaria media) is a serious weed in lawns, soon running out the grass and clover. It can be eradicated by the use of iron sulphate (copperas). The amount of copperas necessary to cover one acre will be 100 pounds. It should be used as a 20 per cent solution in water. In order to make the spray adhere well, a small quantity of molasses may be added.

The iron sulphate solution should be made up as follows: For a 20 per cent solution use one-fifth iron sulphate and four-fifths water by weight and stir until the iron sulphate goes into solution. Then add a small quantity of molasses. It should then be applied as a fine spray with force so as to thoroughly cover the foliage and stems of the plants to be eradicated. The grass and clover will show a stain and perhaps some little injury for a short time. To be effective, the spraying should be repeated until the lawn is freed from the weed. Most broad leaved weeds may be destroyed by the use of iron sulphate solution.

ANIMAL PICTURE MAKES BIG HIT AT THE STAR

A full house greeted the commencement of a two day run of the thrilling two-reel feature "In the Claws of the Leopard" at the Star last night, and everyone went away satisfied that Manager Sather is giving the best possible in films. Today is your last chance to see this big animal feature. A Flying "A" western and two Keystone comedies, make up the rest of the program. Admission 5c and 10c.

Suffragettes Talk Armed Rebellion

LONDON, June 10.—"To use force to subvert a popular rising and at the same time to make no effort to remove the grievances causing the rising is to stoke the fires of rebellion while sitting on the safety valve."

This is how the British government's attitude toward the suffragette problem is characterized today by Lady Sybil Smith, one of the most zealous among the small group of titled women in England who are devoting their time and energies to the advancement of the feminist cause.

"Suffragists like myself," she said, "who find themselves conscientiously unable to subscribe to real, as opposed to technical violence (official or otherwise) can nevertheless feel respect and admiration for the character of those who, like Joan of Arc, Hampden, Garibaldi and a host of heroic souls in the past, think violence justifiable in the service of a great end and have lately acted upon this belief to the public inconvenience, it is true, but terrible cost to themselves."

"Notwithstanding the outcry against the militants, the average person appears to be as far as the members of the government themselves from appreciating the true gravity of the situation. The enfranchisement of women is fast becoming the one object of the most highly educated and advanced section of the womanhood of the country, and their demand is backed by an evergrowing body of opinion. Hundreds of women of more than average talent and character have been rendered desperate by long continued repression, injustice and political quibbling. Moreover, denial of free expression, torture of political prisoners and severe punishment of malefactors are turning the long sufferings into rebels and the rebellious into dangerous conspirators."

"The courage, public spirit and intelligence that should be helping to build up the prosperity of a nation have been turned toward destruction and their possessors broken by suffering and strife, and all because a reform that even its opponents begin to regard as inevitable is wantonly withheld."

"There is one thing and one thing only that drives naturally law abiding and well disposed people to violence, and that is oppression. All popular turbulence is a symptom of undue pressure, due to bad government upon some part of the community."

"In this case a large number of thoroughly patriotic and high minded persons, believing themselves, and what is more to the point, believing many other helpless women to be suffering under an intolerable grievance, have resolved at all costs to make manifest the truth that governments rests upon the consent of the governed."

"For the honor of England, the government should put a stop to a deplorable state of affairs for which it is immediately responsible. There is only one way of doing so, and that is to give votes to women. For years there has been nominally a large majority in the house of commons in favor of woman suffrage. Who, then, but the government is to blame for the fact that women are still unrepresented?"

Baron Rothschild Fights for a Butterfly

BUDAPEST, June 10.—A veritable cyclone in a coffee-pot which has received almost as much attention as the Sautari incident and the Albania affair, has broken out between Baron Charles Rothschild of London and the Hungarian National Museum officials in Budapest. Prestige is at stake over who discovered a "savarovius melanargia japygia" in United States talk that means a new kind of butterfly.

Baron Rothschild is famous for two things—money and fleas. He inherited the former but acquired the latter. Collecting fleas of the rare variety is an expensive hobby. One must be unusually fond of a collection of fleas to have spent as much money on them as the Baron has.

Baron Rothschild is married to the daughter of a wealthy Austrian landowner, Alfred von Wertheimstein. Recently the Baron and his wife came to visit his father-in-law at Groswarden in Hungary. Always on the lookout for butterflies, the Baron made the acquaintance of several officials of the Entomological department of the National Museum. Among these new acquaintances was the famous Hungarian naturalist, Dr. Anton Schmied.

Schmied, honored by the acquaintance of a Rothschild, confided to the Baron that he had discovered an entirely new species of butterfly—the "savarovius melanargia japygia"—on the Austrian emperor's domains near Peszer. Rothschild was as delighted as a child to learn of the new species and very anxious to get a specimen.

Soon after Rothschild's return to London, the officials of the National Hungarian Museum were amazed and much chagrined to read an article in the London Entomologist, written by the Baron, in which the writer told of his discovery of a new butterfly, hitherto unknown in Europe. The Baron made no mention of Dr. Schmied. He claimed all the credit for the discovery. The head of the museum wrote a letter declaring that the butterfly was not discovered by the Baron but by Dr. Schmied.

Recently Dr. Schmied attempted to go on the Crown domains at Peszer. He was ordered off. Schmied learned that, thanks to his excellent connections at Vienna, Baron Rothschild had secured exclusive rights for "butterfly hunting" on the Crown domains. He also learned that the Baron had presented numerous specimens of the "savarovius melanargia japygia" of which he claimed to be the discoverer, to the Vienna and London museums. Finally, the ministry of education of Hungary and the Museum brought action against the domain administrators and the too friendly domain officials were defeated. Dr. Schmied was duly accredited with having discovered the "savarovius melanargia japygia," and he was granted permission to hunt butterflies all over Peszer.

Baron Rothschild, it is claimed, will not admit defeat.

Co-operation as Practiced in Italy

FLORENCE, Italy, June 10.—At the beginning of its investigation of co-operative banking societies, the American commission on agricultural co-operation, assembled by the Southern Commercial Congress, has had the advantageous experience of first visiting a part of Europe where co-operative banks have not made much headway.

Agricultural co-operation is practiced in only one form in the country about Florence—co-operative societies for the purchase of agricultural machinery, fertilizer, seeds, etc. This is chiefly due to the fact that in the early days the merchants of Florence were the landowners and their estates were farmed on a share basis by the peasants, the landlords furnishing the house, cattle, machinery, fertilizers and seed, and the farmers furnishing the work. The merchants were able to secure all the credit they needed to finance their farms through their banks in Florence and the farmers themselves had no need of credit. If crops were bad the landlord furnished food for the peasant farmer until the next harvest. This system of land tenure still prevails, and study of the systems near Florence has shown the commission that co-operative credit institutions are only possible where the need is great.

Comparing Italian conditions with American, one of the Florentine experts who appeared before the commission suggested that in the United States the solution of the problem of farm finance, so far as money for operating the farms is concerned,

What Every Womanly Woman Wants

One of the fondest desires of millions of women is to have beautiful hair.

This desire can be gratified without the slightest risk, for druggists everywhere, and Chas. Strang sell a hair tonic called Parisian Sage for 50 cents, will turn dull, lifeless unattractive hair into lustrous and attractive hair in two weeks, or money back.

Put the name on your shopping list right now, and be sure and get the genuine. Every package has the girl with the Auburn hair upon it.

Since its introduction in America, Parisian Sage has won unstinted praise from women of refinement who have learned what a delightful and refreshing hair tonic and dressing Parisian Sage is.

Just because the makers are absolutely certain that Parisian Sage is the only preparation that kills the pernicious dandruff microbes, they are willing to guarantee it to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp, or money back.
