

JAIL PHYSICIAN DECLARES THAW IS NOW SANE

Canadian Doctor Puts Prisoner Through Stunts to Prove Sanity—No Authority for Extradition—Likely to Go Free.

May Be Deported as Undesirable Alien and Returned Over Same Route as He Entered.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 22.—"Harry K. Thaw is perfectly sane." This was the dictum here today of Dr. Joseph Noel, jail physician, after an exhaustive examination of the slayer of Stanford White in his cell here.

Assured that New York's request for the extradition of Harry K. Thaw will not be granted by the Canadian authorities, George Carnegie, his brother-in-law, is reported to be arranging to have a yacht in Canadian waters, in which Stanford White's slayer will be taken to Virginia.

Thaw's Sherbrooke counsel, Attorney Shurtcliffe, returned here today from Ottawa, where he had been interviewing the heads of the immigration service. Shurtcliffe told Thaw flatly that he probably would have to leave Canada, but that he positively would not be returned to New York state.

The authorities here have taken in dead earnest a jesting started report that noted New York gangsters had been employed to break into the jail here and rescue Thaw.

Magistrate Mulvena postponed for a week the case against Mitchell Thompson, a chauffeur, accused of bringing Thaw, an adjudged lunatic, into Canada.

Owing to his fear that a rescue would be attempted, the governor of the jail refused today to permit any visitors to see Thaw.

It is understood, on the other hand, that Roger O'Mara, Thaw's Pittsburgh friend, has been asked to send two of his huskiest strong-arm men here to guard Thaw against any attempt at kidnapping by the emissaries of New York state.

That party here which is eager to send Thaw back to Matteawan is bitterly asserting that Thaw's friends are exerting political pressure at Ottawa to gain their ends.

BANKERS WAGE BATTLE AGAINST CURRENCY BILL

American Bankers' Association Through President Hepburn, Denounces Measure—Domination by Government Is Approved.

Regional Reserve Plan Instead of Central Bank Arouses Criticism—Some Features Commended.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Bitter denunciation of the democratic currency bill was voiced here today by A. Barton Hepburn, president of the Chase National Bank of New York and chairman of the currency committee of the American Bankers' association. Hepburn's attack came at a conference here of representatives of banking and clearing house associations, called by the currency committee to discuss the Owen-Glass bill.

Domination by the government of a federal reserve board which is intended to control banks; the regional reserve plan, dividing the country into twelve ones, each having a separate federal reserve bank instead of creating a single reserve bank, as Hepburn all along has advocated. He also objected to the provision making the government responsible for notes issued by banks.

"The proposed law," said Hepburn, "has many commendable features. It creates a central bank and establishes branch banking. It also recognizes bank assets in the form of commercial paper as a normal and proper basis for bank currency and provides for keeping the government current funds in use instead of locking them up in the treasury vaults. But while we have reason to rejoice over the force of sound principles recognized, we must regret that the bill only partly embodies them."

Hepburn severely criticized the provision making the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, the comptroller of the currency and four others to be appointed by the president and the senate members of the federal reserve board on the ground that they would be under the president's domination and might become a dangerous political machine. He also objected to the provision which requires national banks to furnish capital for the proposed federal reserve banks, but without giving the former the slightest control over the latter. Hepburn wanted to know why banks should be asked to furnish this capital any more than any other industry. He also asked why the whole people should not furnish it through the United States treasury.

The bankers hope to reach an agreement tomorrow on a concerted form of protest against the bill. The members of the currency committee would not say whether the protest would take the form of a request for a new bill or amendments to the present measure.

Forty-seven states were represented at the meeting, the delegates representing the financial institutions with assets in excess of fifteen billion dollars.

CAMINETTI MAY PLEAD GUILTY TO INDICTMENT

Defendant Says That He Will Not Attack Character or Testimony of Girl and That He Does Not Deny His Guilt in Case Against Him.

Facts Not Disputed, Merely Application of Mann Act Challenged—Two Counts Likely to Be Dropped.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 22.—F. Drew Caminetti, son of the United States commissioner general of immigration, and the next to be placed on trial here for violation of the Mann white slave act in taking Lola Norris to Reno "for immoral purposes," probably will know his fate before Maury I. Diggs, his convicted companion, is sentenced.

The Caminetti case is set for Tuesday, August 26, at 10 o'clock. Diggs will not come up for sentence until September 21. In the meantime there is a strong probability, it has been hinted, that Caminetti will plead guilty, since the facts on which the indictment are based have not been denied, but merely the application of the Mann act challenged.

According to Special Government Prosecutor Theodore Roche, two of the six counts included in the Caminetti indictment—those dealing with inducement and persuasion—may be dropped, and the case prosecuted simply on alleged complicity in transporting the two girls, Lola Norris and Marsha Warrington.

"On the other hand," said Roche, "the persuasion and inducement counts may have to be retained to show collusion in getting the girls to leave Sacramento."

Despite declarations that Caminetti when the time came would plead guilty to the charge of transporting Lola Norris to Reno for immoral purposes, he made a statement today that he would rather go to jail than attack the character of Miss Norris, his companion.

"I would rather go to jail than deny any statement that Lola may make on the witness stand," he said. "She is a good girl and has treated me right. I will not attempt to dispute anything she says. She has been fair with me and I propose being fair with her. I will not deny my relations with her."

WRECK SURVIVORS ARRIVE AT SEATTLE

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 22.—There may be a man or woman somewhere among those saved from the wreck of the State of California, in which, it is now estimated, thirty-four died, who can tell chronologically the story of that disaster, but if there is, he or she must be of iron nerve, and injured almost beyond belief to the perils of the sea.

This morning at the offices of the Pacific Coast steamship company, on Pier B, there are men who will tell you that they went down into the valley of the shadow of death and came back—how and why they do not know.

They arrived in Seattle, these survivors of the State of California's crew, at 2 o'clock this morning from Juneau, aboard the steamship Jefferson.

They are not men who talk of Providence, but there were one or two who seemed to feel that an unseen power somewhere must have raised them from the depths and cast them up for rescuing hands to grapple and save.

CRATER PARK TO SECURE AID OF DEPARTMENT

Assistant Secretary Miller of Interior Department Promises Active Co-operation in Making Park Accessible and in Improvements.

Lane Coming for Extended Stay Next Year—Major Morrow Says Twenty Miles of Road Graded This Year.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior, A. H. Miller, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, wife of the secretary of the Interior were all greatly charmed with Crater Lake, and promised co-operation in efforts to improve the park and to better the highways leading into it. Mrs. Lane was particularly interested and volunteered to interview Secretary Houston of the department of Agriculture to obtain his co-operation in improving the highway through the forest reserve. The party arrived at the lake Wednesday afternoon and left Thursday morning for Klamath Falls, where Mr. Miller addressed the Central Oregon Development League now in session there. The party were escorted from Medford to the lake by County Judge Tom Valle, Park Superintendent Will G. Steel, Alfred Parkhurst of the Crater Lake company, Robert Brevard and G. Putnam. From the lake to Klamath Falls the party were the guests of S. O. Johnson of the Klamath Development company, which seeks the hotel concessions at the park held by Mr. Parkhurst.

Secretary Miller was kept busy at the lake conferring with Superintendent Steel, Mr. Parkhurst and Major Morrow of the U. S. army corps, who has charge of the road building in the park.

"I am a friend of the Crater Lake park and will do all that I can to advance its interests," said Secretary Miller. "The park will get more attention from the department henceforth than it has ever had. That is the reason I am here, to personally acquaint myself with the situation. Next year, both Secretary Lane and myself will come and spend several days at the lake."

Major Morrow states that twenty miles of road will be graded in the park this year and he had surfaced next year. About 200 men are being worked. More could be employed, but cannot be had. Experiments on various classes of surfacing are to be made this fall, to see how they stand the winter. The road down Sand creek to the railroad and the road from the Inn to government headquarters are being graded first.

"The best thing Jackson county can do to aid in the development of the Crater Lake park is to provide good roads," said Secretary Miller. "I am glad to hear of your proposed bond issue. If it carries it will do more to bring people to the park than anything else. Good roads are the best investment possible. There is no limit to the benefits that will accrue. No one can predict what will follow the visit of tourists, brought by good roads. Upon the bond issue will depend to a large extent the future of Jackson county."
