Matt McGrath, one of the ideal American athletes, who has won honors in two Olympiads, and former champion hammer thrower of the world, will probably never again show his old form on the field. He was attacked by five men in a New York theater roof garden the other evening. Five men might have thought their fists were sufficient to subdue him. But they didn't. One of them struck him on the eye with a cane, and as a result, the surgeons think he will be blind. McGrath has the satisfaction of knowing that his assailants were held by the courts.

MOULD SCHOOL STUDY TO SUIT PUPILS' EYES

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 29.—"Children who are beginning to develop nearsightedness should be segregated into special classes," said Dr. Park Lewis of Buffalo here today in addressing the congress of hygiene. "They should have the same curriculum as other pupils, but should study from oral graphic illustrations instead of from books. In no other way than this is progressive nearsightedness to be arrested. Books are convenient, but by no means essential." The next hygiene congress will be held in Brussels in 1915 and according to custom the next president will be a Belgian. Among the physicians appointed to the permanent international committee was Lewis M. Terman of Stanford university.

Match Langford and Johnson BOSTON, Aug. 29.—Jack Johnson and Sam Langford, the Boston pugilist, are matched to meet in Paris, December 20, according to announcement at Langford's training quarters here today. SOUTTER DEFENDS HUNTING CAMP FROM HUGE MOUNTAIN LION

Edward Soutter, the capitalist, who holds the championship in catch-as-catch-can wrestling with Royal Chinooks, has returned from a hunting trip covered with new laurels as a camp defender against a monstrous mountain lion—quite the largest on record. In camping with Charles Gay and other sportsmen, Mr. Soutter was in the mountains hunting deer. A big campfire was kept burning to scare away cougars, bob-cats and other varmints, said to be plentiful in the vicinity. Shortly after midnight Mr. Soutter awoke, with the indefinable feeling that some calamity was impending and that his every action was being watched by unseen enemies. He piled more brush upon the fire and grabbed his rifle. Looking through the darkness of the outer circle of the fire, he saw two luminous eyes glaring at him from the inky blackness of the forest. From the size and distance apart, the eyes might have been those of an ichthyosaurus, but never having heard of that animal, Mr. Soutter was certain that an immense mountain lion was preparing to spring upon him for its midnight repast. The eyes did not seem to move, but glinted steadily with a demonic, sullen and metallic glare. A twig snapped. The brush cracked. The swishing of the lion's tail was plainly heard and the sensitive ears of the now thoroughly excited deer-slayer caught the rhythm of the beast's purr as it watched its victim crouching in the firelight. The huge eyes seemed to creep nearer and nearer. Another dead branch cracked. The animal was evidently crouching for its spring. Unable to longer stand the terrific tension, Mr. Soutter brought his trusty Winchester to his shoulder, took careful aim between the glaring eyeballs and fired. There was a deafening roar, followed by the metallic impact of lead upon a heavy body—and Mr. Soutter knew that he had hit his mark. Although the eyes still glared, the glare was fitful and uncertain. The other hunters, awakened by the shot, came running, guns in hand to assist the camp's defender. In the bush that followed, the dripping of the animal's blood upon the dead leaves, as its life slowly ebbed away, could be plainly heard. The party had been driven to the camp by Mr. Soutter in his Hippo-holic. Fearing explosion from the flames he had driven the car some distance in the brush. The lion's eyes of the midnight prowler proved to be the glare thrown from the camp fire on the headlight reflectors. Mr. Soutter proved himself a remarkable midnight marksman by penetrating the radiator plumb in the center. The cat, after all, was a four-cylinder one. Dr. E. R. Seeley, who also drives a Hippo, says he understands Mr. Soutter's mistake, for the car is a "bear cat."

TRY IT! SAYS SAGE TEA DARKENS AND BEAUTIFIES FADED, GRAY HAIR

Mixed With Sulphur Makes Hair Soft and Lustrant and Removes Dandruff The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is coming to vogue again, says a well-known downtown druggist. It was our grandmother's treatment and hundreds of women and men too, are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest importance. Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mossy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is the most popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply dampen a soft brush or sponge with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight, and by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application it is restored to its natural color. What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which in so attractive, besides prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. Here, you gray-haired folks, get busy, look years younger.
