In the race for popularity "Officer 666," which appeared all last season at the Gaiety Theater, New York, is leading the laughing field and running true to form, spurred on by the plaudits of a much pleased public who are backing this melodramatic farce favorite to win the success records of this year.

 "Officer 666" is a funny cop. He makes you laugh and keeps you guessing. Every night you are sure he is going to make an important arrest, and every other minutes or so during the performance it looks as if he might, but the gentlemanly crook under surveillance is a smooth member of the light fingered fraternity, trained to avoid the nets set for him by the officers of the law, so that, although "Officer 666" has been hot on his trail for over a year he is still at liberty, the enjoyment of which is participated in to as full an extent by those who watch as it is by he who is "wanted." "Officer 666" will be seen at the Page tonight.

EAGLE POINT EAGLETS

By A. C. Howlett

Last Monday morning I started out about 7:30 to take Miss Ross Newton to her school and try to collect something for the Mail Tribune and about the first man I met was W. E. Hammond, the clerk of the Lone school district and learned from him that the coyotes had killed something over a hundred goats for him. The next man I met was T. F. McCabe, but neither of them were in arrears on the Mail Tribune list so I do no business with them, but Mr. McCabe informed me that he had just picked 63 boxes of Johnathan apples off of twenty, six-year-old trees and he said that they were as fine as anyone could wish.
 Passing on from there I went to see Eli Dohack, found him at home but did no business because he could not find a receipt he claimed he had from the Mail Tribune office, but while I was there he showed me some of his prize onions and he told me that he had sold 3000 pounds off of a small tract of land near the home and while we were talking about it, he proposed to measure the piece of land and found it to contain six and a quarter square rods, a pretty good yield for so small a piece of ground. He also had some corn that compares favorably with some of the rest of the corn in the valley. I then started on and the next place I stopped was at the Naragan farm and found Carl Naragan a busy as a nailer in his barn but did no business with him. Went home and got my dinner and there met with Wm. Cooley and two lady friends, A. B. Zimmerman, his son Noble, and their friend, James Lake of Illinois, Arthur Smith who has just arrived from Klamath county with a friend, J. J. Boyerman of Halfway, Ore. After dinner I started again and the first place I stopped was at the beautiful farm and orchard of L. K. Haak and as I went to the door to meet Mrs. Haak the first thing that attracted my attention was a lot of corn that had been shucked and laid up to dry and upon asking Mrs. Haak if that was some choice seed corn she laughed and said "why no, that is some corn that Mr. Haak brought in to feed his chickens," but it looked so good that I thought it was some extra choice seed corn he had selected. I tell you we raise corn in this Butte creek country. On meeting Mr. Haak he asked me to take a walk out into his orchard which I did and there saw some as fine Spitzzenburg apples as I ever saw and the trees were simply loaded, he also showed me some extra fine New-towns and I thought that they were hard to beat and so they were. Going from there the next man I went to see was Fred Palanze. He has a fine young orchard and had it not been for the grasshoppers he would have raised an immense crop of alfalfa, but they destroyed the second and third cutting, but while I was there he paid me a year's subscription to the Daily Mail Tribune. I went from there to the Corbin orchard but I find that I will not have space this time to give it the notice it deserves so will leave that for some future time.
