

TAIL-ENDERS SHARE IN PRIZE MONEY OF WORLD'S SERIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Our in-grown, double-riveted, concrete-bound, hermetically-sealed idea of something pretty soft is the crucial fate which this year overtook Third-baseman Grant, Pitcher Arthur Fromme late of the Cincinnati Reds, and Larry McLean, one-time catcher for the Reds and afterwards of the St. Louis Cardinals. Saying Reds and Cardinals bring visions of the tail-end of the National League race, but McLean, Fromme and Grant are among those present at the daily combats between the Giants and Athletics and will be in on the grand divvy of the money.

Look it over. Grabbed off from the tail-end teams during the season and plunked right down in the midst of one of the finest little collections of world's series money a ball player ever gazed upon. If the Giants win McLean, Fromme and Grant stand to have between $3,000 and $4,000 velvet handed over to them. In the meantime, one might look around and discover Leon Ames. At the beginning of this season Ames and Mathewson were the only members of the "Old Guard" of the Giants. Mathewson is the only guardman left now. It may be recalled that Ames was traded to Cincinnati in the deal which brought Fromme to the Great White Way. It will be a strange winter without the usual contribution from the grand old tussle for Leon.

Fans Save Crandall "Old Doc" Crandall might have been left out in the cold by being skidded to St. Louis when McLean was brought on here had it not been for a terrible yell from all corners of the immediate territory surrounding McGraw. Crandall is almost an institution. When McGraw sent him to St. Louis along with some cash which Mrs. Helene Hathaway Robinson Britton, might buy a new gown, rumors of insurrection, revolutions, guerilla warfare, bush-whacking and what-not began to come from the Giants' camp. "Old Doc" was brought back in a hurry and was much in evidence as one of those who will share in the spoils.

Young Shawkey, Athletic pitcher, hasn't any great wait to register. Shawkey was in the International League when the season opened. In the middle of things Connie Mack picked him. Now he comes in for the swing. Only Three Veterans As one of the queer twists of baseball, but three of the players who battled for Mack and McGraw in the series between the two teams in 1905, appear in the series this year. But these three are the mainstays of the contending managers. They are Bender and Plank, the hope of the Athletics in the box, and Mathewson, McGraw's steady. McGraw won the championship in 1905 with Mathewson, Gashley, McGarity, Ames, McGarr, Gilbert, Devlin, Dahlen, Browne, Mertes and Donlin. Mack had Bender, Plank, Powers, Shreck, Davis, Murphy, Love, Monte Cross, Lord, Hartsel and Seybold. Davis is now chief adviser to Mack but seldom gets in the game. Don Murphy is a substitute. The regular outfielder named Murphy, now with the Athletics, carries the handle Eddie with his name. Lord is with Boston and the rest have passed to the minors. Of the Giants of 1905, Ames with Cincinnati; Dahlen manager of Brooklyn; Devlin is to manage Oakland of the Pacific Coast league; McGarity is managing Tacoma in the Northwestern league; Donlin is now playing independent ball. The rest have passed on as do all players sooner or later.

More Recent Changes There have been changes also since 1911 series. Melonis is at first for the Athletics in place of Davis; Rube Oldring is the only outfielder of that time remaining; Schang will probably do the bulk of the work behind the bat in place of Thomas hereafter. Among the Giants, Burns has taken the place of Josh Devore in left field. Shaffer took Herzog's place at third for the greater part of the season, but the slaters value in a world's series may put him back on third at any time as a fixture.

The wedding of Miss Maude Bratney to Scott Hightall of Omara, Neb., was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. A. Bratney, 742 West Fourteenth street, Wednesday night, the Rev. R. W. GIANTS CRIPPLED BY LOSS OF THREE OF BEST PLAYERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics today accepted responsibility for the loss of yesterday's game if the game's fans think it was due to his failure to use a pinch hitter in the ninth inning.

"I would do the same thing tomorrow," he said, in a calm situation. I did not use Schang, Daley or Walsh because they never had faced Mathewson and I rejected Danny Murphy because he was not in good shape. Besides Plank has always batted well against Matty."

A drizzle this morning and yesterday's showers have soaked the Polo grounds, and the chances for the game's postponement were greater today. This may mean the making or breaking of the Athletics. Mack faces the necessity of pitching a youngster or of returning Bender after a day's rest. Rain would rest Bender and Plank.

At 7 o'clock 1500 fans were waiting outside the grounds. Despite the condition of the grounds, McGraw said the game would be played unless it rained. If it is postponed the teams will remain here. The Giants are anxious for the battle to continue, believing the "breaks" now are coming their way.

If the Giants win the series they will be deserving great credit. No team was ever forced to engage in a series for the world's championship under such adverse conditions. Snodgrass, Mertes and Meyers are out of the game, and their batting is badly needed.

SCENE FROM THE "SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS" AT THE PAGE FRIDAY, OCTOBER 10

WHAT SALEM THINKS OF THE SHEPHERD

(Salem Statesman) "It makes one feel just a wee bit droopy about the eyes," was the thoroughly earnest comment of a woman who saw "The Shepherd of the Hills," the dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's novel of the same title, at the Grand last night, when the curtain went down on the scene where the shepherd of the Hills made known that the man who was dying was his son and the man who had caused the wrong in the first place.

There was a good mixture of tears and laughter in this comedy drama of the Oark hills and the audience liked it well. It will be on again this evening and it is expected a packed house will greet the performers. The show is full of the quaint aphorisms and homely wisdom that appeals to the heart while bringing smiles. The peculiarities of the mountain people, their loves, their feuds, were portrayed with a convincing clearness.

"The Shepherd of the Hills" is such a play that is good to see and good to hear. It deals with the old problems but tells a story of joy in the great, majestic hill country where men are judged by the bigness of their hearts. It is as interesting as the novel. In the way of scenic effects the production was as true to original setting as paint and canvas can portray. The cast was strong throughout and gave excellent portrayals of the eccentric characters. Grant Matthews, Senior, played by Montgomery Holland, was just like he was pictured in imagination, and he bore out the strength and generosity of the traditional mountaineer. Sammy Lane, the heroine, played by Margaret O'Brien, was quite satisfying; Preaching Bill, portrayed by Lew Silvers, was full of genuine humor and brought many laughs by his drolleries. Daniel Hewitt, the Shepherd of the Hills, was good, while, because of his good acting there is nothing too bad to say of the villain, If Olie Stewart, played by Arthur Beamish, could be called a villain.

JACK COMBS IN HOSPITAL FOLLOWS FORTUNES OF GAME

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.—With a telephone receiver strapped to his head, Jack Combs, the Athletic pitcher, hero of two world's series, lay in a Philadelphia hospital yesterday getting the account of the game from Connie Mack's son, Earl. "Through the entire game," Combs said today, "I lay with weights on my head and feel holding me immovable, with the receiver to my ear. That game took more out of me than if I had played myself."

"I saw the crowd and Connie sitting on the bench. How I wished I was there! But I was helpless, and the strain was terrific. "When Earl said: "There goes the game—Matty has just singled to left! I don't know what I said. I tried to smile at my wife, who sat at my bedside, but I guess it was a sickly smile. "Why did we lose? Because Matty was steady as a clock. He pitched unbeatable ball. "Eddie Plank was the Athletics' star. We are all proud of him."
