RUSSIAN EXPERT BEFUDDLES JURORS

KIEVE, Russia, Nov. 3.—Professor Kokovoff, an expert in matters of religious ritual, was still on the stand at the Mendel Bellis murder trial today. His testimony grew more and more technical as he went deeper into his subject until the lawyers were nearly as much befogged as the jury, and it became hard to tell whether he was favoring the prosecution or the defense. The president of the court, asked repeated questions in an attempt to make matters clearer, but without much success. The jurors yawned with weariness and every one whose business did not compel his attendance left the court room. Bellis, overcome by the strain of the trial and unable to follow the witness' testimony, remained in a condition of partial-collapse.

NEW RECORDS IN RACE

had dropped out through accidents. "One's coming?" From the lofty roof of a half-finished exhibition building in Balboa Park, a few moments before 8:20 a. m. today, a carpenter in blue overalls, whose view over the hill was better than that of the thousands on the ground, announced the arrival in San Diego of the first car. Half a minute later Billy Carlson of San Diego, driving the big Simplex No. 2, swung around the bend, and with a roaring engine drew up to the right of the checking stand at exactly 8:20 o'clock. Almost at his tail light was Olin Davis, another San Diegan. It was the much-feared Locomobile, and Davis' time of arrival was set down on the official score card the same as that of Carlson. But he had started from Los Angeles four minutes behind, and he was just that many minutes to the good in elapsed time.

THREATEN SULZER WITH INDICTMENTS EVE OF ELECTION

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The New York majority campaign drew to a close today with threats of indictments, rumors of assassination plots, warnings, vilification and 57 other varieties of assorted strong language filling the atmosphere. Ex-Governor Wm. Sulzer and his former graft investigator, John A. Hennessy, were the individuals most prominently mentioned as candidates for indictment. It was said an effort would be made to have true bills returned against them for trying to persuade ex-State Senator Stillwell to make an incriminating affidavit in return for a pardon from Sing Sing penitentiary. Hennessy unquestionably did try to get Stillwell, a Tammany legislator who was caught grafting and sent to the penitentiary to make charges against other Tammany men. From the Sulzer-Hennessy view-point, this was simply an effort to get at the truth. The Tammany theory is that it was conspiracy or something else criminal. An indictment was also threatened against Sulzer charging an attempt to suborn perjury in connection with the testimony before the court of impeachment, of Duncan Peck, who accused Sulzer of trying to persuade him to tell untruths relative to a contribution he made. Sulzer's friends accused Tammany men of warning Sulzer that they would kill him if he ventured into the Sixth assembly district before election. The ex-governor said he would enter it nevertheless. District Attorney Whitman's investigation into Hennessy's graft charges against Tammany officials was scheduled for resumption late in the afternoon. Betting was 5 to 1 on John Purroy Mitchell fusion candidate for mayor, against Edward E. McCall, Tammany's candidate.

WILSON REFUSES RECOGNITION

Mexican waters, probably on Wednesday, Admiral Fletcher's command, it was stated, would remain at Vera Cruz "pending orders from Washington." There was one ray of sunshine—indications were that intervention, if it proved necessary, would be a simpler matter now than a month ago. The Mexican federal army, it was pointed out, is no longer unitedly for Huerta. His inability to pay the troops has caused dissatisfaction among them. The Huerta government is bankrupt. Nor was it believed that the rebels would combine with the Huertistas in resisting an American force. The president's declaration at Mobile, too, to the effect that the United States forces would remain in Mexico only long enough to restore order, even if he were compelled to send them there, was also said to have disarmed much opposition among Mexicans to American intervention.

STREET CAR STRIKE PARALYZES TRAFFIC AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 3.—"This is the most successful strike in the history of the street carmen's international union," said Organizer Thorpe, commenting today on the complete tie-up which has prevailed here for more than 24 hours on interurban trolley car traffic in and out of the city as well as on every line in the local system. It was generally believed that the authorities would oppose any effort to resume the service until after tomorrow's election. The politicians feared that serious trouble would follow such an attempt and were bringing all possible pressure on the city government to stave it off, with election so near. Election over, it was understood, that the company intended to insist on police protection and to start the cars under strong guards. Quiet Prevails. Four hundred deputy sheriffs and policemen were guarding the street car barns here today. Quiet reigned, but most people thought this was simply because the company was making no attempt to run cars. It had enough strike-breakers in town to have manned a tolerably complete service on its entire system but seemed to consider it unwise to use them. Governor Ralston's denial that he had ordered state troops held in readiness to keep order proved true, but it was a fact that Mayor Shank had asked for them. It was the governor's view that Shank could prevent rioting if he swore in special policemen. Labor leaders declared that the strikers were behaving excellently and asserted that disorders were solely due to irresponsible non-unionists. To prove his sincerity in making this assertion, President Beatty of the Central Labor Union advised Governor Ralston yesterday to see that crowds were prevented from gathering about the car barns. Strike Breaker Killed. The statement by President Todd of the street car company that a majority of the motormen and conductors were opposed to the strike met with a denial from union sources. The company refused another offer to arbitrate. An autopsy proved that Isaac Fleisher, the strike-breaker who was killed yesterday when a crowd rushed the Louisiana street barns, was struck in the back by a bullet, evidently fired by a member of his own party. Joseph Johnson, a striker shot by a policeman earlier in the day, would live, it was said. Musical Act at Star. The best vaudeville act ever at the Star, was the verdict of the packed house that greeted the Witzels at their opening performance yesterday. They play saxophones, banjos, trombones, bells, drums, etc., and are experts on each instrument. Their saxophone duets are extra good and the entire act goes with a vim that is seldom seen in any act. The photoplays on the program today are better than usual including two clever and laughable comedies and an excellent picture of the Pledge Day exercises at the University of Oregon.
