

10,000 ROSES FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN TO PLANT TODAY

The rose committee worked valiantly all day Tuesday—that is the sixteen who came worked so—but were unable to get enough cuttings ready to supply one entire building. So the distribution was made immediately after noon today, and more than ten thousand rose cuttings will be given to the school children of Medford.

These roses are the choicest varieties grown and many rose lovers all but slaughtered their roses in order to insure a sufficient supply.

Mrs. J. F. Reddy who, as chairman of the civic section, inaugurated the rose day last summer, cannot be too highly commended for her splendid—not to mention strenuous—work in making the city of Medford a city of roses.

This year we had only a beginning and next year with the hearty cooperation of all the school children we should make a much more creditable showing.

The committee is planning a campaign in which it is hoped at least 10,000 rooted rose plants will be set out by the property owners next spring. Then in another year we should be able to give a rose show that will be the talk of the whole country.

Rose planting and tree planting will so beautify our city that we need not worry about getting people to come here—they won't be able to stay away.

One of the significant things about this rose campaign is the interest the children are taking in it. When Mr. Sheldon spoke to one grade in the Washington school there came near being a fight in the rear of the room between two young Americans who were each sure that he was the one who would win the five dollar prize.

At the Roosevelt school not only the children wanted the roses but the teachers and principal begged to be allowed cuttings to use in beautifying the school grounds.

Mr. Sheldon's announcement of the rose distribution met with a hearty cheer from the entire school in one building. It all goes to show that what we need is a little encouragement and practical help to make Medford a bower of roses.

You know Shorty Garnett—he sells Toledo stoves and Maud S. pumps (not the sort girls wear on their feet), well he has earned the everlasting gratitude of the civics department by loaning seven pairs of rose shears.

The rose committee is deeply indebted to N. S. Bennett of the Eden Valley Nursery, who came at nine o'clock on Tuesday and spent the entire day making rose cuttings and instructing the ladies. He is an expert grower of roses and is making a specialty of rooting plants for early spring planting.

Those contributing roses on Tuesday were: Mrs. J. F. Reddy, Mrs. H. M. Coss, Mrs. M. L. Alford, Mrs. J. A. Perry, Mrs. J. E. Watt, Mrs. Bert Anderson, Mrs. Frederick Hopkins of Central Point, Mrs. W. T. York, Mrs. N. S. Bennett, Mrs. Edgar Hafer, Pierce the Florist, J. A. Westerlund, Mrs. W. L. Vawter, Mrs. E. B. Pickel, Mrs. Chas. Schieffelin, Mrs. W. W. Glasgow, the Catholic Rectory.

SAYS RESURRECTION DAY 1000 YEARS LONG

There was nothing dull about Pastor Gillespie's lecture here last night. He held his audience entranced while he carefully opened up the scriptures on the subject, "Victory O'er the Grave." He appealed only to the Bible for support and his points were well made and clearly and conclusively proven.

He showed that the whole human race is not a living race but a dying race. Before the flood the average man lived about 700 years before he became the complete victim of death. At the present time the average length of life is a little above 20 years. The Bible points out that relief will come from this sad condition. That through the 1000 years reign of Christ and his saints (Rev. 20:6) the world will be resurrected and brought back into harmony with their creator, through restitution processes (Act. 3:20,21) by the knowledge and judgments of the Lord. Ps. 96, Isa. 26:9, Ps. 98. The willful wicked, after having received full knowledge and opportunity, will be destroyed in the second death. 2 Pet. 2:12-14. Acts 3:23.

HAWAIIAN PLAY "BIRD OF PARADISE" AT PAGE FRIDAY

Oliver Morosco's production of Richard Walton Tully's strikingly original play, "The Bird of Paradise," will be seen at the Page Theater Friday, Nov. 14.

Amid the confusion of financial and political plays, the bewildering mazes of society comedy and the sometimes nauseous mess of problem and sex-drama, "The Bird of Paradise" stands forth in powerful and refreshing relief.

It is a play of the Hawaiian Islands—not a play of native life as the stay-at-home romancers imagine it, but as it is; it is factual, philosophical intensely realistic, and in its practical teachings and sometimes satiric comment on the extraneous effects of American civilization and rush for wealth full of lessons for the American public at large. Withal, it is not a preachment, but a vivid and absorbing drama—an unusual, picturesque, almost bizarre entertainment.

Dr. Paul Wilson, a bright young American, is fascinated by the apparent idyllic beauty and care-freedom of the native life of Hawaii. To tell the truth he is most of all fascinated by the beautiful Pele girl Luana, and when Luana, alike fascinated by his culture and bias manners, insidiously summons him to her existence—he goes. The drama then becomes an absorbing contrast in the lives of two men. Paul Wilson, under the influence of the native woman, sinks. A shiftless but not hopelessly lost beachcomber, humorously dubbed "Ten-Thousand-Dollar" Dean, is beneath the benign eyes of a woman of his own race, and he goes—up. The tragedy at the end lies in the hopelessness of poor Luana. Paul Wilson, waking at length to his race sensibilities, is ultimately redeemed. But Luana, the native girl, with her longings for indulgence, and the saccharine music of the ukulele, and the Kanaka intoxicants, and primitive life, finds these inborn traits and her unutterable love for Paul hopelessly apart. It is Luana's Caucasian love and Malay life which gives the last act its intense realism and somber dramatic power.

Mr. Morosco has assembled a masterful company. Lenore Ulrich, still in her teens and a veritable miniature Sarah Bernhardt, gives a touch of almost lurid fire to her portrayal of Luana, the child of Pele. William Desmond, a splendid American actor just back from a starring tour in Australia, is to be seen as Paul Wilson, and David Landau, a western actor of convincing power, returns to the role of Dean, which he created. Robert Morris, one of the most experienced character actors in the United States, plays the planter, Capt. Hatch—a very striking and realistic assignment. The rest of the cast is splendidly efficient and includes the original troupe of native musicians and dancers brought from Honolulu by Mr. Morosco especially for this production.

The volcano scene of the last act is a terrific bit of realism.
