PARCEL IN WHICH TWO MEN WILL TRAVEL TO SEE AMERICA Attilio Zancordi and Eugene Viarelli, of Venice, arrived recently in the United States with the strangest of strange vehicles. Nothing more nor less than a huge hoghead, open at both ends and containing, an interior case hung on gimbals, is the conveyance. Bound around the outside with two iron rails and propelled by two man power, the cask will be rolled about the United States by the young Venetians, who say they are going to see every part of the country before they stop rolling.

with a pick and a plow pan, yet fall utterly with the pruning hook and spray pump. It was so in this case. Fortunately, however, good trees of the most profitable varieties, Newtowns and Spitzenburgs, had been planted in an ideal location. The foundation for a successful orchard had been laid, but all the essential operations—pruning, spraying, cultivating, irrigating, thinning, packing and marketing—were sadly neglected, with the result that profits were a minus quantity.

MITCHELL FILES
