PARADING ITS INSINCERITY

THE PORTLAND OREGONIAN, after three years of bitter opposition to Governor West, has endorsed his policy in the following editorial:

The candidate for the governorship who discards the customary platitudes and proposes a rational plan for the reduction of taxes and for economy in public administration will win. He is the governor everybody wants and is looking for.

The candidate for governor who proposes to purge the public payrolls of their numerous taxpayers will be irresistible.

This has been Governor West's program. Yet the Oregonian fought every effort of the governor to economize, reduce taxation, purge the payrolls, abolish boards, save the state school lands and backed up the legislature in its many measures to increase taxation and thwart the governor.

On February 25, 1913, Governor West sent the following veto message to the legislature:

I return herewith House Bill No. 628 with my veto. This bill carries 74 items and a total appropriation of $1,251,218.90. Most of the items are meritorious and the appropriation necessary for the proper conduct of our state government.

Good business and the best interests of the taxpayers of this state demand that such appropriations as are covered by this bill be classified and presented in smaller units. I know of no greater service you can render to your state than that of presenting these appropriations in the manner here suggested and thereby set an example for future legislators.

Why does the Oregonian, even today, oppose the program of economy West is striving to inaugurate? Why does it misrepresent the curtailment of expenditures in the game department as the creation of a "political machine"?

Why does it support the worse than useless desert land board in its supine policy of doing nothing and oppose West's program of action and reform? Why does it belittle West's plan of a state committee to draft an initiative bill removing the political driftwood lodged about the capital?

Because the Oregonian's pinhead policy of playing peanut politics does not permit the practice of sincerity or honesty. If it were otherwise, it would have supported the governor in the really meritorious parts of his program, even though it discarded the emotional and grandstanding methods of accomplishment. But the really little big city paper is entirely too small to judge persons or events upon their merits and practices a partisanship belonging to the dark ages of journalism—long since discarded by progressive papers.

The only candidate now before the people whose platform contains all the demands made by the Oregonian editorial above quoted, is Dr. C. J. Smith. If the Oregonian was sincere, it would support Dr. Smith—but it isn't. It can't be. It is opposing him—and attacking him—which should cheer the doctor's heart—for the Oregonian's support means defeat, and its kiss, political death.

Fur Bearers of South America

Next to the pelt of the silver fox of Labrador and ermine, the snowy fur whose costliness has made it the badge of royalty and riches, the chinchilla of South America carries on its back about the most expensive material used in fashionable feminine attire.

High up on the eastern slope of the Andes in sections of Peru, Bolivia and Chile the chinchilla has its habitat. Living at an elevation of from 8000 to 12,000 feet above the level of the sea, its chilly home is responsible for its thick, warm coat and also largely for the exorbitant price it brings. It is hard to get and not plentiful—therefore it is wanted.

"It is a hopping rodent mammal," writes W. A. Reid in the Monthly Bulletin of the Pan American Union, "somewhat resembling our common squirrel, and when standing upon its hind legs as it does when eating

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush this through faded, lifeless locks and they become dark, glossy, youthful.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value their even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.
