

BETTER PRICES NEEDED TO KEEP LOGGERS WORKING

PORTLAND, Or., March 28.—That there is much room for improvement in the logging industry of the Pacific northwest and that some of the camps will remain idle unless better prices are obtained for logs was indicated by prominent operators who met here today as members of the Pacific Coast Loggers' association.

As a result of the low prices that have prevailed for some time, few camps are operating to full capacity, with the result that several hundred men who, under more favorable conditions, would be at work in the woods, will be idle.

The meeting was devoted to routine business and the election of officers.

Alex. Polsen, president of the Polsen Logging company, Gray's Harbor, was elected president. The following were elected vice-presidents: J. S. Gowen and Mark Reed, Puget Sound district; A. P. Stockwell, Gray's Harbor district; H. C. Clair, Columbia river district; A. W. Callow of Aberdeen was elected secretary and E. P. Blake of Tacoma was re-elected treasurer.

George E. Johnson, A. J. Moreley, Albert Brix and Joseph Irving were named a committee to assist in arousing interest and collecting funds for a Hoo Hoo house to be maintained during the Panama Pacific exposition at San Francisco in 1915.

PEACE DOVE COOS IN KINDER HOUSEHOLD

The Kinder family of Griffin creek, whose family troubles had more angles than an uprising in Chihuahua, have buried the hatchet, and signed a peace pact that passes the understanding of their attorneys, Mr. Kinder who was barred from the home place, by a court order pending the final decree in a divorce suit filed by Mrs. Kinder, has returned, signing over all property rights to his wife, and Owen, the son, who was alleged to be the cause of the dissension, is now plowing by the side of his father in the field.

The crest of the Kinder trouble was reached when one morning six weeks ago, during the progress of a family jangle, Mrs. Kinder jabbed Mr. Kinder in the neck with a pitchfork. According to various versions of the war given to Prosecutor Kelly, it was a dull day when a murder threat was not hurled in the family circle. But now all is peace and serene and calm.

IMPERATOR STARTS VOYAGE WITH BOW DECORATION WRECKED

THE IMPERATOR LEAVING WITH ONLY CLAWS OF HER EAGLE, WHICH SUFFERED IN STORM SHE FOUGHT ON TRIP HERE.

With the elaborate eagle and ball decoration at the bow of the Emperor, of the Hamburg-American line, wrecked, the steamship left New York with more than four thousand persons on board. Part of the gold lined decoration on the bow of the Emperor was carried away by heavy seas on her last voyage to New York. The agents for the line wanted the broken eagle repaired before leaving. It was found that it was too late. So the Emperor went out with a gold ball on her bow and two claws clutching on the globe. There was no sign of the bird to which the claws belonged.

HENRIETTA CROSSMAN, WHO APPEARS AT PAGE NEXT TUESDAY

MISS CROSSMAN AT THE PAGE IN TONGUES OF MEN

Henrietta Crossman, who has endeared herself so deservedly to the hearts of the American theater-going public comes to the Page March 31, in "The Tongues of Men" by Edward Childs Carpenter, in which she scored a remarkable success at the Harris Theater, New York. After she had opened her season there, it was the critical and public trend of opinion that she has the best play in which she has appeared in years.

The story of "The Tongues of Men" has to do with a famous grand opera favorite who is appearing in a piece that has some risque moments. A prominent young minister takes it upon himself—without having seen the performance—to criticize it from the pulpit and condemn the woman who is playing the title role, saying that she must be had in private life to enact such a part.

The opera singer happens to be present during his tirade, makes the acquaintance of the rector, and dares him to come into her world. She tells him that he does not know what he is talking about, but is merely taking the ordinary view, and that the people in her sphere are just as good as those in his—only not so hypocritical.

The amusing and interesting situations follow the minister accepting her dare and entering Bohemia, which proves to be quite different from his dreams. During his readjustment of ideas a number of unique scenes take place, and Miss Crossman and her brilliant supporting company are shown at their best. The cast includes Frank Gilmore, Margaret Randolph, Sheridan Block, Homer Granville, Edward Lee, Laura McGilvray, Katherine Presbrey, Paul Dancet and Florence Fontayne.

NEW MANAGER KORINEK COMPANY

The Korinek Veterinary Remedy company have secured E. B. Barthrop as general manager. He has occupied positions in the past which will make him especially valuable to the company, having at one time had complete charge of the laboratories of Langley-Michael Co. of San Francisco, the largest drug house on the coast, leaving that firm to take charge as general manager of the Hollister Drug company, the largest wholesale drug house in the Hawaiian islands, at Honolulu. After spending five years there he received the appointment of internal revenue collector at Seattle. Since leaving the employ of the government he has spent his time looking after his property interests, which are large and varied.

Mr. Barthrop will not only give his time in the interests of the company, but becomes financially interested as well, having purchased a very substantial block of stock.

It is evident that he thinks highly of the future of the company, as he is leaving exceptionally profitable business connections as well as a good chance to become a member of the next legislature to cast his lot with the Korinek Veterinary Remedy company.

Mr. Barthrop is a man of pleasing personality and will be a welcome addition to Medford's population. He spent two days of the past week here and expressed himself as delighted with the valley and the up-to-date appearance of Medford, and will move here with his family on June 1.

It is understood that he already has a deal on for a house on North Orange street.

STRONG MARCH WIND SWEEPING VALLEY

Former residents of the Dakotas, Montana, and other breezy sections are rejoicing today, for a genuine, full grown March wind swept over the Rogue river valley this morning, attaining as high a velocity as 35 miles an hour, and fluctuating between 25 and 30 miles an hour. The direction veered from southeast to southwest, as 120 miles of the wind got within.

The breeze stirred up all the uncollected dust and papers in the streets and then whipped them up and down Main street, keeping merchants busy protecting their stock. Less country people than usual blew into town to do their Saturday trading.
