ashland youth CREATES WIRELESS TELEGRAPH STATION

Darrell Minkler of Ashland has as complete an amateur wireless station as one could well expect to find. He has created it wholly himself in the past two years. It is located on his grandfather's property north of the Elks' Temple. The amount of mechanism Darrell has erouded into his little station building is simply astounding says the Ashland Record.

The way he handles it and discuss es his various devices puts the average grown person to the blash. The writer is free to confess that he felt like a greenhorn in the presence of this fifteen-year-old scientist. isn't a mere plaything either. With it Darrell gets the wireless messages from all the coast stations between Portland and San Francisco and can send messages himself to a distance of 100 miles. He talks regularly with boys who have stations of Grants Pass and Medford.

In short, Darrell is so well equipped for business that the government requires him to operate under both a station and an operator's license. These licenses are issued by the department of Commerce and Labor at Washington City. In issuing them the government specifically retains the right to revoke them in case of war or dire public peril and either to close up or appropriate for government. The licenses are signed by Secretary Nagel of the department above named. Darrell is expecting the coast inspector to pay him a visit

Not only has Darrell built and equipped his station and become an expert in its operation, but he is also a student of wireless telegraphy and can tell you all about the laws governing it, the codes used, its progress etc. He takes all the magazines dealing with the sugject and lets nothing escape him. Undoubtedly the name of Darrell Minkler of Ashland, Oregon will be heard of in the higher circles of the wireless profes-
