OF OPERAS, BACK Tofinish Librettos

E. M. Andrews arrived last night from New York City, where he has been engaged for the past six months in writing grand and comic opera librettos. He informs us that he has finished a grand opera which is in the hands of the composer, Signer Floridia, who is regarded as the most capable composer in this country. The name of the opera is "Linda, and the plot is laid in Virginia in about 1812.

Mr. Andrews has also contracted with Victor Herbert, Reginald De-Koven and Alfred Rovyne, for light opera librettos. He has two unfinished librettos which he will complete in the next two months. Ed is a real Medfordite and says our beautiful scenery, climate and surroundings are much more conducive to literary work than the noise and whirl of a great city.

leisure time in New York I have looked up the fruit business, followed the Rogue river apple and pear through its various commercial ramblings from the time it lands at the auction market until it reaches its destination in the hands of the consumer. Our apples bring the price on the fancy to do is to get our fair share. Ore- Sermon, The Gospel in a Man. gon is no yet organized. One has only to watch the marketing of fruit in New York to see that California has a perfect system, while we are yet working along and wasting our energy by divided effort. There should be one great association for southern Oregon, an association that is strong enough to command respect in the markets, and in case of the market being temporarily glutted this association should be prepared to put fifty or one hundred cars in cold storage. Of course it takes time to work these things out, and I presume our various associations are figuring along these lines at present."

"Old King Cole" is the libretto Mr. Andrews is writing for Herbert, and "Twelfth Night" for Rovyne. For De Koven he has "Creole Days of New Orleans."
