COLONEL MILLER JACKSON PIONEER

Colonel Robert A. Miller, democratic candidate for governor, who has been spending several days here is a Jackson county pioneer. He was born in Lane county, Oregon, on October 22, 1854. That same year he went with his parents to Jacksonville, Or., where he was raised on a farm adjoining the town of Jacksonville. His father, J. N. T. Miller, was a stockman as well as a farmer. Raised in a mining camp, he rode the range with the cowboys many years and learned the cradles of the frontiersman at first hand. He watched the development of the state in its primitive condition and took part in that development. He quit the public schools to attend the Willamette university at Salem, Or., where he graduated in the class of 1878. He spent five months in a surveying party in Klamath county just prior to the Modoc war, and rode the range in that county for a number of years.

He was city editor of the Daily Statesman at Salem, Or., in the year 1880. From there he removed to Portland, Or., where he studied law, and then engaged in the newspaper business. During the years 1884-4 he was editor and proprietor of "The Hesperian," a weekly high-class literary paper. He returned to Jacksonville, Or., and in 1886 was the nominee of his party for state representative in the state legislature and was elected by one of the largest majorities of anyone running for this position in that county. In 1888 he was re-elected, and was nominated for congress by acclamation in 1890 and was nominated as one of the presidential electors in 1892. In 1893 he was appointed register of the Oregon City land office, serving four years. He obtained his title of "Colonel" by being placed on the staff of Governor Penney as a reward for his service in making the governor the nominee of his party.

While engaged in many campaigns in Jackson and Clackamas counties in many state and national campaigns, and although a militant and aggressive fighter for the cause of democracy, yet he has always been able to retain the respect, esteem and friendship of his political opponent.

The last time Senator Chamberlain ran for governor, Robert A. Miller was a candidate for attorney general. He has been before the public for nearly forty years, and helped as president of the Southern Oregon Fruitgrowers' association and secretary of the Southern Oregon state board of agriculture to build up the interests of the Rogue River valley. He has taken part in the development of Oregon along all of its best lines of activity.

FRUIT GROWERS LIGHT UP POTS

Weather Forecast. Fair tonight, light frost; Tuesday, fair, warmer; southerly winds.

Jack Frost and the orchardists had another round last night, with Jack a poor second. The low maximum of Sunday, followed by a clear, still night, brought the temperature down sharply during the evening, and orchardists were advised to set their alarms for midnight. In one or two places firing was necessary as early as 11:30, although for most of the valley floor it was deferred till 1:30 to 2:30. By that time 30 degrees had been reached both north and south of town, and firing was general.

About 2:30, after the orchardists had become too busy to pay any attention to the central office, Ben Sheldon and Forecaster Drake made covering all the orchards from Allen's to Phoenix. Every pear block on the valley floor was being fired, but in no instance was the full battery of pots in use. In some orchards only one in four were lit, the orchards being prepared for a much heavier attack than was experienced. The pall of smoke hanging over the city at 3:30 was so dense that an arc light could not be seen a block distant, but by 4 a breeze from the northwest largely cleared the town. Clouds began to form about 4 and the drop was checked at an average of 27-28 as a minimum for the valley generally.
