

WELSH MEETS CROSS TONIGHT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 28.—Freddie Welsh and Leach Cross will meet at Vernon tonight in a scheduled twenty-round bout for the privilege of boxing Willie Ritchie for the lightweight championship title July 4 if Ritchie will make the match.

Welsh was favored today by the bettors to the extent of 10 to 4. Some Cross money appeared, but the Welsh admirers backed the price from 2 to 1 during the afternoon. The figure was expected to prevail at the ringside.

Although the men had agreed to weigh 135 pounds at the ringside, Welsh waived his weight rights at noon when they met for an examination by the club's physicians. They weighed in at the doctors' office, Cross being a shade over the 135-pound mark and Welsh 133½.

The sky was cloudy late today and a cool wind blew, but fair weather was predicted for tonight. Advance sales indicated a good sized crowd.

HOW GRANTS PASS RECEIVED ITS NAME

(Glendale News)

"The Grants Pass Courier recently asked if there was anyone who could give any light regarding how Grants Pass received its name. The News has made some inquiries regarding this, and Mrs. M. Ellif, a settler of '52, tells us her version, which is, no doubt, the correct one. Mrs. Ellif, a young lady, then lived at what was then known as Ben Halstead's Ferry, across Rogue river, during 1853, living at the ferry, which was located about two miles from the present site of Grants Pass. This ferry was used for a number of years. She states that an Englishman by the name of Croxton, bought the ferry and business from Ben Halstead, and settled down there about the time of the civil war. He was a republican, as the new party was then called, and as the war progressed, became greatly interested in the career of U. S. Grant, who was in command of the union armies near the close of the war. To show his patriotism, he named the postoffice and settlement Grants Pass, and as such it became one of the important posts in Southern Oregon. Mrs. Ellif also said that when she lived there there was no knowledge of the existence of such a man as Grant, though she had understood since that Grant was once on the coast, but she thinks it may have only been a rumor. The facts are as stated above, however."

Mrs. Ellif is mother of Mrs. J. E. Enyart of Medford.

PEACE OUTLOOK HOPEFUL

To one thing President Wilson had made up his mind—he cannot popularize the war. Chairman William F. McCombs of the democratic national committee has made a canvass of the party leaders and reported that opposition to hostilities was general except on the part of a few jingoes. This report's effect has been to influence the administration to exhaust every other means before using physical force further. Every honorable means, it was stated, would be resorted to to preserve peace.

Hawley Never Satisfactory

(From the Coquille Herald) "L. J. Simpson has given out the information that he will not allow his name to be used as a candidate for congress from this district, as his business affairs will demand all his attention for some time to come. This is greatly to be regretted, but it seems that Mr. Simpson's word is final. Now if the people of the coast section want a man from their part of the state it is up to them to do some lively thinking. It hardly needs the saying that Hawley is not satisfactory, never has been and never can be. He is undoubtedly a "good man," in his way, "means well" and all that, but as a representative in congress he is a dismal failure.

"We want a live man, not a big, fine looking chump. It comes then, to a question of 'who is the man?' So far as heard from there are two men out from this part, both democrats. Whether any democrat could be elected is an open question, but on the odd chance that he could, it is up to the people of that political persuasion to inform themselves thoroughly about the two men.

"W. H. Meredith, of Curry, impresses the Herald as being a man of abundant energy and ambition, at least, and of many ideas of his own. His residence in a remote corner of the district is against him, but that ought not to be fatal.

Kipling's Vision of Man's Conquest of Time and Space

No one has visualized so graphically as Rudyard Kipling the changes that the development of aerial navigation is bound to bring about in human relations and human conceptions. Man's mastery of time and space, with which he dealt so imaginatively and convincingly in "With the Night Mail," furnished the theme of an address recently delivered by this most famous of living English writers before the Royal Geographical society. In the May number of Popular Mechanics Magazine Mr. Kipling is quoted as follows:

"The time is near when men will receive their normal impressions of a new country suddenly and in plan, not gradually and in perspective; when the most extreme distances will be brought within the compass of one week's travel; when the word 'inaccessible,' as applied to any given spot on the surface of the globe, will cease to have any meaning.

"Naturally, so long as we travel by sea, we must embark from a port and look out for the landfalls. But the time is not far off when the traveler will know and care just as little whether he is over sea or land as we today know and care whether our steamer is over forty fathoms or the Tuscarora Deep. Then we shall hear the last ports of New York and Bombay howling like Tarshish and Tyre. Incidentally, too, we shall change all our mental pictures of travel.

"The men of the present are already scouting and reporting along the fantastic skyline of the future. Nearly all that can be accomplished by the old means of exploration has been won. The old mechanism has been scrapped; the moods and emotions that went with it must follow."

To Europe Via Airship

For several years past airmen have hopefully looked to "next year" as the one in which the Atlantic ocean would be crossed in a vehicle of the air. Each year has brought its disappointment; and while the feat will undoubtedly be accomplished some day, it seems unlikely that 1914 will be able to credit that milestone to its records. In some respects the event seems even farther off than three years ago. While experienced explorers are at this moment battling with untried routes in the Antarctic, none of them has either a dirigible or aeroplane in his outfit. They have air-propelled sledges, but no air craft.

To the layman the dirigible, although slower in its movement than a plane vehicle, seemed the more likely to succeed; but the destruction of the Vanman and several Zeppelins in mid-air has made him skeptical. At present the only suitable gas for the purpose is hydrogen, the explosive dangers of which are well known. It has even been questioned whether a dirigible may not, under conditions of very cold, dry air, by its own passage generate something in the nature of the pale blue flame sometimes seen in cold weather on fast-moving belts. In which case a very small spark and a very minute gas leak would be as efficiently deadly as a thunderbolt. In aeroplanes, construction is stronger than three years ago, the power is greater and much more dependable and long-flight records have been made. The Mediterranean has been spanned in flight; mountains with their great variety of atmospheric conditions have been crossed. However, as yet no airman has made a flight of 1700 consecutive miles over water. To the innocent bystander, who is not supposed to know anything about flying, it would seem sensible, though commonplace, for some one to fly his machine 1700 consecutive miles over some inland water, like Lake Erie, for example, before casting off the dock lines on a trip across the big pond.

In the opinion of Sir Hiram Maxim, the dirigible, in war at least, is

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

a failure. He says: "We have come to the end of our tether in dirigible balloons; they are useless and practically impossible. It is nothing less than madness to sacrifice any more lives and treasure in attempting what is manifestly an impossibility."

Some day a vehicle will fly the gap; it may even be perfected in time to qualify for the $150,000 prize offered by the San Francisco exposition for an around-the-world flight. However, the day, predicted by Kipling, when air craft landing inland will take New York as a port off the map may be considered as sufficient remote to cause no immediate anxiety.—H. H. Windsor in the May Popular Mechanics Magazine.

YOUNGEST SOVEREIGN IN THE WORLD

The May Woman's Home Companion contains an article about Marie Adelaide, grand duchess of Luxembourg and the most youthful ruler in the world. Following is an extract from the article:

"Like some old-world romance, as picturesque as any woven by ardent fancy, the charming story of Marie Adelaide, grand duchess of Luxembourg unfolds itself. In all the present-day history of Europe it has no counterpart. Young, beautiful, one of the richest princesses in Europe, she ascended her throne two years ago, at the age of 18, as the most youthful ruler in the world.

"Small as her country, is, only a thousand square miles, its military strategical situation is inestimable, for through it runs the great highway which makes easy an invasion of Germany or of France. Because of this, it is a precious corner which every neighboring power covets longingly, but dares not appropriate because of mutual greediness. After long years of siege and conflict, the state's neutrality and independence were assured in 1867 by the treaty of London. Upon this scene there has come forward, by right of descent, the slender, fragile figure of a fair maid of twenty as defender and guardian of the state. In the prosaic history of today the situation in its charm, its glamor and its gentle pathos, stands unique."

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Hatton, the authors of "Years of Discretion," have entrusted a new work entitled "The Call of Youth" to Joseph M. Gaites for production in Chicago early next month. The cast will include Gertrude Coghlan, Mary Nash, Virginia Hammond, Walter Hampden and Arthur Stanford.

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your Bladder troubles you.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and elog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then set fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.
