

CROWDS FLOCK TO SEE CIRCUS AND BUFFALO BILL

Shouts, the creaking of wheels, the straining of horses, the roars of wild beasts, commands, men who hurried here and there, each one intent upon his task, each one busy, each one working with an enthusiasm and with a vim that only one kind of life can give, that of the big tops. For let it be known that in the early hours of this morning the circus came to town.

And busy hours they were, hours in which, one by one, the great, trucking wagons were unloaded from the flat cars, hours in which the "skinners," or drivers, rocked on their seats atop the huge vehicles swaying along as they handled the reins of many horses on the way to the circus lot.

Bigger Than Ever

And the Sells-Floto Circus and Buffalo Bill (himself) is much bigger, much more beautiful this year than ever before. Everything is different—there is a something about the whole, great moving city of tents which gives it an air apart from the ordinary circus, which makes it more attractive. Once upon a time it was tradition that a circus wagon must be red. But that is changed now and the wagons of the Sells-Floto-Buffalo Bill show glisten in white and gold and silver. The tents, too, are larger—for now they cover eleven acres of ground, with the assertion from the boss canvasman himself that they will seat 14,000 persons.

And the extra largeness of the show this year was one of the reasons that men worked so hard and that the unloading of the cars took longer and gave a bigger free show, than ever before. With every available inch of space packed, with every advantage taken of the economy of loading, the circus train this year was many cars longer than it ever has been.

Everything Is New

Naturally that will mean that the performance this afternoon and to-night will be even more worth seeing than it has been in the past. Those at the circus lot give assurance that everything this year is new—new seating capacity, new acts, new tents, new animals, new everything except the price. That remains what it has been in other years, 25 cents general admission, just half of the charge made by other shows.

As to the program, the managers promise much. With the show this year is Buffalo Bill himself, who, with his cowboys, his Indians, his riders, his ropers and his ranch girls, presents a new spectacle, entitled, "Warpath," which depicts the progress of civilization from the time of the aborigine to the present day. Then, too, there are many individual acts, those of Tex McLeod, Wild Horse Mike and other famous riders. In the circus proper there are the forty clowns, a congress of equestriennes, nearly a hundred acrobats and aerobats, the trained Hynes, brand new animals, given into the keeping of the circus by the U. S. government; Zora and her three herds of trained elephants; Captain Dutch Recardo, the man who trains lions and tigers with a buggy whip, and many other acts of merit. The performances begin at 2:15 this afternoon and at 8:15 tonight. The menagerie is open an hour before the performance.

STORE AND HOME RUINED BY FIRE NEAR BUTTE FALLS

The store and home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Dupree, who lives at Dupree spur, four miles north of Butte Falls was completely destroyed by fire Thursday night about nine o'clock.

How the fire started, is not known, but the supposition is that oil, which was kept in a stove exploded. No one was home at the time and the fire was well under way before discovered. The loss is estimated at $2000, covered by insurance.

Last summer Mr. Dupree lost a large amount of timber by fire and about six months ago, his auto was burned in some mysterious way.

EAGLE POINT EAGLETS.

By A. C. Howlett.

Last Monday night, May 4, we had a parent-teachers' meeting at the schoolhouse and in connection with it an old people's old-fashioned spelling match, which afforded considerable amusement for the listeners, for some of the worst breaks imaginable were made. For instance, one of the men that we all knew better, spelled until "until," and another spelled Wednesday "Wenesday," etc., and that shows the ease with which one can misspell a simple word. But everybody had a good time and went home feeling that there is something yet to learn from the spelling book.

Miss Olive Betty came into town in her father's big auto, bringing her mother, Mrs. T. A. Betty, and grandmothers, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Betty, and drove up to Mr. Heath's store just the same as though she was in a one-horse buggy. She seemed to be mistress of the situation and handled the great machine as well as her father.

I understand that the manager of the Eagle Point Opera house has placed eighty new chairs in the building, so that now those wishing to attend the picture shows will not have to sit on a rough board without a back rest, as of old—a decided improvement.

They have several miles of fence to put up for different parties in this section and expect to be here for several weeks.

George Phillips is setting the anchor posts for A. J. Daley's fence at this time, so as to open up the new road between here and intersection of the Medford Brownsboro road.

Ex-Sheriff Joe Rader and wife were out the night of May 1, attending the dance here. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ashpole. Word came to me yesterday that Mr. Dupree, who has a sawmill near bridge 9, on the P. & E., had his store building burned, but I have not been able to learn the particulars.

day cake as large as his show case in the store, but he was evidently excited.

W. R. McCloud, who has a store near the upper steel bridge, was also doing business here Tuesday.

We are having quite a contest here between J. V. McIntyre and C. W. Clements to see who will be the champion tennis player of Eagle Point.
