

SMOKELESS FRYING, FIRELESS COOKING TO BE DEMONSTRATED AT HOME ECONOMICS SCHOOL

Butterless Cakes to Be Made by Miss Peet—St. Mark's Hall to Be Transformed Into Domestic Science Kitchen—Mail Tribune Home Economics School to Open Monday, May 25.

Arrangements have all been completed for bringing Miss Peet to Medford to conduct a Home Economics school for cooks and housewives. This will open next Monday afternoon at 2:30 in St. Mark's hall. There will be a special lecture Tuesday evening, at which Miss Peet will demonstrate one of the most unusual recipes in the world, that of baked ice-cream.

Will Make Morning Appointments. Miss Peet will have an exceedingly busy week but she will be at St. Mark's hall each morning, ready and willing to answer questions. She feels in these informal, heart to heart talks she is often able to do a great deal of good and render some real assistance, and then she enjoys the social feature attendant upon these morning meetings, when she gets to meet her Home Economics classes personally and more intimately.

Miss Peet has studied household economics thoroughly. She says this is indisputably an era of high prices. This fact must be faced, but she says it is not at all a matter for discouragement, and that American women everywhere are learning to keep house economically in spite of high prices. Miss Peet says that prices are higher but food is better. Pure food laws and enforced better sanitary conditions make for higher prices but we get a much higher quality of food for our money. She will have many helpful suggestions to offer along the line of economical marketing and will show Medford women how they can reduce the cost, without lowering the standard of living.

Hall to Be Comfortable. As many hundreds of women will be eager to hear Miss Peet lecture and see her cooking demonstrations and taste the fine dishes she will prepare, a large hall has been secured. Ample and comfortable seating is being arranged, so that St. Mark's will be a most comfortable place in which Medford housewives may take a profitable vacation next week. While they will be relieved from house-keeping duties for several hours each day, they will nevertheless be learning many helpful ideas and suggestions which they can put into immediate use in their household operations. The chief charm of Miss Peet as a domestic science lecturer and culinary expert is that all of her theories have been tried out and proven practical; all of her methods have been put to the actual working test and are indisputably good ones. Her manner of telling about them is simple and unscientific; her terms are just the ordinary everyday ones housekeepers themselves use in discussing their household problems. Housekeepers, professional cooks, domestic science teachers and students all vie with each other in praising Miss Peet and approving of her lecture course and cooking lessons.

Will Make Home Made Bread. Miss Peet is a firm believer in home cooking. She says there are very few if any families who do not prefer the home made varieties of bread, cake, canned fruits, preserves and pickles. She says many women have an idea that the preparation of all these things will require too much time and drudgery, but that on the other hand what they do require is intelligence and skill. Miss Peet says cooking is a most fascinating art and that the housekeeper who has not found this out is unfortunate indeed. She believes she will be able to convince all who attend the Mail Tribune Home Economics School of this interesting fact.

She believes in plain cooking, well done, and will show Medford women the value of this. She will show them how to make good home-made bread that will weather their husband's faces in smiles that won't wear off. She will show, too, how to cook a steak in a manner to convince any man that he doesn't know how to do this better than any woman alive. Miss Peet says most men labor under this delusion. She will demonstrate how to make wholesome pies, another cookery treat which will please the men, for whoever saw a man who didn't like more pie than was good for him. But Miss Peet makes the kind he can eat all he wants of without fear of distress.

Other good news relating to the Mail Tribune Home Economics school will appear tomorrow.

REFUGEES ARRIVE WITH THRILLING TALES

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 20.—With nearly a score of American, English, and other refugees from Mexico, the Pacific Mail steamship Newport, Captain Trask commanding, arrived today. Many of the refugees, among them Clement S. Edwards, United States consul, formerly stationed at Acapulco, and Walter M. Neal, general manager of the El Favor silver mines, state of Jalisco, brought thrilling tales of Mexican attacks and their adventures in escaping from the war ridden country.

Neal told of the murder of two of his companions by an attacking party of natives who pillaged the mine at El Favor April 28, stabbing to death G. E. Williams, an Englishman, and A. B. Headley, an American. Neal was stabbed himself five times before he escaped into his barricaded home.

NEW INDIAN AGENT PLANNING TRIPS TO CRATER LAKE

(Klamath Northwestern.)

Authentic information was received here yesterday from Washington that Indian Agent Edison Watson has been removed from duty at the Klamath Indian reservation and a man named Freed from Oklahoma division will soon arrive to take his place. Mr. Watson was communicated with last night and stated that he was expecting to receive notice of his removal at any time, but that he had heard nothing official yet.

Behind the removal of Indian Agent Watson lies a story. When Professor Adolph C. Miller, new head of the federal reserve board and until recently assistant secretary of the interior, was here last summer to inspect the reclamation project, he sent word from Crater Lake to Watson that he wanted to meet the Indians of the reservation and talk over their affairs with them.

When Professor Miller and his party arrived at the agency there were no Indians in sight. He asked Agent Watson where the Indians were. "Oh, I didn't get them together," Watson is said to have replied. "I thought my official reports and I myself could give you all the information that you wanted." "That's where you're wrong," Professor Miller retorted. "Under this democratic administration we are not doing things that way. It may have been all right formerly for the government to get all its information from agents of bureaus, but President Wilson and Secretary Lane want their information first hand. I asked to see the Indians and I want to see them. I can learn your viewpoint any time I want to read your reports. Now go out and get the Indians."

And Professor Miller waited while Agent Watson went out and summoned the Indians for a council with the agent of the great white father. It is stated that Watson was slated to go from that time, and that Secretary Lane had only been awaiting a suitable man to take his place.

PLANNING TRIPS TO CRATER LAKE

(Portland Telegram.)

Judging from many inquiries received at the Portland Automobile club's office, the trip to Crater Lake is going to be one of the most popular drives this coming season. The reason for the popularity of this trip is that one may make a journey of about 850 miles without going over any part of the road the second time.

As soon as the mountain passes are free from snow, which will be in about two or three weeks, one may leave Portland and drive into Central Oregon via Mount Hood, Wapinitia and Maupin to Shaniko. This part of the trip can easily be made in nine hours, if the roads are at all good. Leaving Shaniko, the best route to take is by way of Madras and Crescent to Klamath agency. From this point you may drive directly up to Crater Lake, but to get the full amount of enjoyment out of the tour one should continue on south from Klamath agency to Klamath Falls, and thence up the west side of Klamath Lake, through Harriman Lodge and Klamath Falls to Crater Lake Lodge. Leaving back, take the road from Crater Lake Lodge to Medford, as shown on page 183 of the Automobile club's tour book.

From Medford to Grants Pass is a fine drive. However, the roads between Grants Pass and Drain are very apt to be rough. From Drain to Portland, the roads even now are in a very good condition. The reason the Automobile club suggests going by way of Central Oregon is that now the roads are in fine shape, but later in the summer they will become very dusty. Another reason for going this way is that more time will be allowed for the Cow Creek canyon to dry out. This part of the Pacific highway is not much of a road, even at its best.

A few of those who have signified their intention of making this Crater Lake trip as soon as the weather permits are W. J. Clemens and family, A. J. Kingsley and family and A. S. Deutscher and family.
