|  | THE presence of representatives of the National City  (Rockefeller) bank and other New York institutions at the recent gathering of ties State Bankers' association at Medford was explamed when the convention passed and petitioning congress not to take further action regulating business.  The action of the banks was evidently part of the organized propaganda carried on by big hisiness to secure immunity from regulation. Wali street presses the but-  One would think that the panic of 1907 had learned the mitry banks better than to again burn their fingers by pulling the Wall street melons ont of the fire. The New try by their umprecedented and unjustifiable action in locking in their vaults the money belonging to the country banks and refusing to return it to rightful owners. The panic was artificial, as the present business depression is,  Why or the purpose of furthering frenzied wance do not want this legislation that the entire nation, legitimate business interests included, have for years clamored fort What is the objection to regulating trusts and monopolies as railroads are regulated? Has it not been promised by all political parties, and was it not one of the great issues upon which President Wilson was elected?  Uncertainty regarding the future is far worse than certainty, for business can adjust itself to conditions, if it |
