

NEWS FROM COUNTRY CORRESPONDENTS

ASHLAND AND VICINITY

The political speech de lux of the season, not only in the way of the address itself but also in relation to the surroundings within which the same was given, was the talk by Senator Chamberlain at the Vining Theater Wednesday afternoon, before an audience which would have made the average theatrical or political manager's heart glad. The senator in his remarks confined himself almost exclusively to national politics for which President Wilson stands sponsor. He was introduced by W. E. Newcombe, local manager of the Western Union.

A party of hunters made a growl some find over the ridge in the Grizzly peak neighborhood the other day. Allen McGee of the local Swift packing products office, and the Davis boys who are cousins and ranchers in that vicinity, were out after game and found a human skull lodged against a log on the hillside in that locality. The find was made near an old sawmill, about four or five miles from town. The theory of the boys is that the skull rolled down the hill, and that in all probability the remainder of the skeleton is somewhere on the ridge higher up from the place where the skull was found. The skull bears evidence of having been exposed to the elements for a long time. It is in possession of the Davis boys who will make further search in that locality.

Pandemonium reigned instead of dignified decorum at city council session Tuesday evening. It seems that, as a matter of courtesy, Mayor Johnson allowed Harry Silver to address that body regarding technical aspects concerning the mineral springs plating project, an enterprise which Silver seeks to discontinue and his line of argument was in that direction, having thoroughly posted himself on the issues involved. Councilman Beaver moved a vote of thanks to Silver for his effort, a movement which the mayor severely discounted. However, the motion was seconded and carried, the council on the question being lined up as follows: Those grateful to Silver, Beaver, Cunningham, Werth, Ashcraft; those in an ungrateful mood, Ware and Cornelius. Much discussion was indulged in bordering upon the acrimonious. Evidently the end is not yet inasmuch as there is a cloud to this Silver lining.

The Normal Bulletin, a neat four-page publication devoted to boosting the normal movement in general and the southern Oregon school in particular, has appeared upon the scene and is being mailed broadcast over the state. It is issued by the Alumni association of the southern Oregon institution. It is illustrated with views and maps.

Earl Brady, who has been ill for some time past and was operated upon recently, died Tuesday morning. Funeral was held Wednesday at the Nazarene church, services being conducted by Rev. Scott. Interment was in Mountain View cemetery. The deceased was a young man 22 years of age, well and favorably known, and considered the mainstay of the family. Besides a widowed mother, Mrs. Sarah Brady, he leaves six sisters and two brothers.

EPISODE NO. 12 AT

IT THRATER TONIGHT

Episode No. 12.—The Elusive Treasure Box. The treasure box is raised by the anchor of a tramp steamer. A sailor spies it—secretly gets it. Arriving at the Bahamas tries to steal away but fights and the box falls into the sea. Jones has a mysterious caller. They are spied on by Braine and Olga. Braine, excited at the identity of this person, levels his revolver. Florence fires and Braine, shot in the wrist, rushes wildly away. Vroon learns about the treasure box and recovers it from the sea. At a meeting of the "Black Hundred," just as the box is about to be smashed open, the lights go out—panic ensues—the lights are turned on—the box is gone and with it three members. Who are they? Again the box is shown—but mysterious hands appear—the treasure chest sinks from view!

Tonight and Saturday at It Theater. Always 10c.

EAGLETS ABROAD

By A. C. Howlett

When I wrote for the Mail Tribune the last time I was telling something of what I saw in Oregon city. The residence portion of the city, that is that part of the city that is on the table land, or up the hill, has grown very materially during the past two years and in the place of the old shacks that were eyecores to the visitors, now stands fine large residences and business houses and instead of the streets being filled with noxious weeds they are nicely graded and graveled and everything would indicate that the city is in a prosperous condition. The next morning, that is Thursday morning, I took a stroll through the main business portion of the city and up to where the Oregon City falls used to be 50 years ago, and talked with quite a number of the business men with regard to the business interests in the city and they all with the exception of one man, spoke as though business was in a normal condition at least and the most of them spoke quite encouragingly of the prospect. I inquired particularly with regard to the effect that the city going dry had had on the business and the most of them claimed that, looking at it from a purely business standpoint that business had been improved in many respects, that the laboring classes, and there are about 700 or 800 men, women and girls employed in the various factories and mills, that they would have the cash to pay their bills when they came due and in many instances the wives and children of the laboring men were better clothed and appeared to be more happy and contented.

They have in Oregon City one of the largest woolen mills on the coast and two or three large paper mills where they use up hundreds of cords of white fir wood that is converted into paper every 24 hours, besides one of the largest electric light plants on the coast, and what little I talked with the men, they seemed to be well satisfied with their lot. Leaving Oregon City on the 2 o'clock electric car for Portland and arriving there about 3 p. m. I spent a few hours visiting and transacting business. I took a car for Fairview where I was met by my two grandsons with a lantern and piloted to the home of my daughter.

Fairview is a small town, incorporated but dry, where they have two churches, a store and a fine town hall where they have the post office, city council chamber etc., a hotel, school house with three rooms and although it is not what would be called a prosperous city, still everyone seems to be well provided for and contented. The few days that I remained there there were two singular accidents happened, the first one was a head on collision of an auto and a wagon. There was a man moving a load of household goods on the Sandy road and on that road is a long narrow bridge that is not wide enough for two teams to pass and just as the man with a team got about half way across the bridge along came two men in an auto running at the rate of about 20 miles an hour facing the team, and the teamster stopped and yelled but to no avail and when the horses saw that there was no way of escape they reared up as high as they could and on came the auto full speed until it came in contact with the double-trees on the wagon and the horses came down onto the front of the auto smashing it all to pieces and cutting the two men quite badly as well as cutting the horses legs considerably. The two men had been in Portland and had been looking through glasses, so could not see a wagon piled with household goods and a span of horses.

The next remarkable accident or incident was the case of a woman who had been washing a garment in gasoline and after wringing it out as dry as she could she put it in a clothes boiler of boiling water and the moment it touched the water the gasoline exploded and took fire burning the woman's eyebrows and hair quite badly, and also burned her on the face and neck, she said that she started to run out of the room and by the time she reached the door the room seemed to be completely filled with the blaze, but it did no other damage than what I have related.

The last time I wrote I finished up by saying that I was ready to start for Gresham which I did and found a neat little city of about 3000 inhabitants but the weather was so stormy that I did not go around very much although I saw enough to satisfy me that there was considerable business carried on among other places I visited was the office of the Gresham Outlook, a live little newspaper with a subscription list of about 800. Gresham has a surrounding country that will compare favorably with almost any part of the Willamette valley for productive-ness and the farmers have as a rule good dwellings and barns and seem well supplied with the necessities of life.

Damascus, Oregon, Oct. 21.

TABLE ROCK TABLETS

Mr. Johnson, agent for the Raleigh Medical Co., was working this part of the country Tuesday.

Now is the time to get after the blight, as the color of the leaves indicate plainly where it can be found. Colonel Washburn was doing business in Medford last week.

Prof. Johnson made a visit to his homestead in the Reese creek district Saturday. On his way up he stopped at Eagle Point to hear Governor West.

Lawrence Fitzpatrick and Miss Hazle Byrum attended the show at Medford Saturday night.

Mrs. Loren Gregory and daughter and Grandma Collins were visitors at the Collins home Tuesday.

W. B. and L. Byrum are up in the Evans creek country this week on a deer hunt.

E. W. Carlton, J. C. Pendleton and A. L. Seabrook are busy leveling several acres of land and doing other improvement work on their ranches.

James Reese who suffered a broken ankle some time ago while playing football is still going on crutches. Those from here who laid aside their work and went to Central Point Friday afternoon to hear Governor West were well pleased with what they heard and think their time was well spent.

Henry Gregory of Agate was in these parts Monday and while here purchased a work horse from James Pendland.

H. D. Ydiard and wife of San Jose, Cal., are visiting relatives at the Lydard home and likewise enjoying our superb climate, beautiful scenery and fine fishing.

R. E. Nealon was visiting friends in the Tolo district last Saturday and Sunday.

Oliver Pendland and family who spent the summer in Marshfield have returned to Table Rock and are occupying the house on the Miller ranch.

They say Marshfield is a good place to make money, but cannot compare with the Rogue river valley in climate or sociability.

Of all the large number of photographs of candidates but one is to be seen in Table Rock, a large full size front view photo of W. C. Hawley, displayed by S. M. Nealon on his sign board.

Since the rains of last week the heavy land in the western part of the neighborhood is in fine shape to plow and more than 20 teams are busy turning it over.

Owing to the high price of grain at the present time and the prospect of it bringing a good price next fall the acreage of fall sown grain in this district will be much greater than usual.
