

NEWS FROM COUNTRY CORRESPONDENTS

ASHLAND AND VICINITY

Superb team work marked the playing of high school football on local grounds Saturday, although Ashland won over Medford by a score of 13 to 0. Briskness was a feature from start to finish. Playing on their native hench encouraged the home team to victory. At the same time the game was played mostly in Medford's territory. Up to date honors are just about even between the two squads. Medford also having vanquished the teams against which Ashland has been pitted. If Medford should win the struggle next Saturday on its home grounds, this will necessitate the playing of a third game to decide the championship. Local rooters had recourse to some novel stunts which kept everybody in the best of humor, visitors as well as town folks. The attendance was big—in fact, the largest thus far of the season. Seelye Hall and Bob Hammond of Medford were respectively referee and head linesman. Dr. Lance Brice of Ashland umpired the game.

The observance of the golden era of Methodism, as far as the local church is concerned, ended Sunday evening, with Epworth league services. The anniversary week began November 8. Wednesday evening there was a get-together event along social and historical lines, the affair also partaking of the nature of a reception in honor of the pastor, Rev. W. L. Douglas. Pastors and prominent laymen of other denominations joined in making the homecoming week a memorable one in the history of the church, the institution of which dates from 1864. Sunday morning, November 15, Rev. Walton Skippworth of Grants Pass, pastor here in 1880-7, occupied the pulpit, at which service the edition was thronged. Historical data furnished at the Wednesday evening meeting was mainly supplied by the following pioneer ladies of this vicinity whose recollections were not only of the Methodist church, but also of other organizations throughout the valley: Mrs. A. H. Russell, Mrs. A. L. Harvey and Mrs. M. Gillette, 1852; Mrs. Kate Howell, 1853; Mrs. George Anderson and Mrs. James Thornton, 1862; Mrs. Jacob Wagner, 1860; Mrs. J. W. Mills, 1858; Mrs. William N. Mathes, 1863, and various others of medieval times. Beginning Sunday evening and occupying Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights in addition, the programs of the Epworth league will take up an order of exercises connected with the "clum" movement.

An analysis of the voting done at the recent election will be of interest both as regards specific precincts as well as the county at large. Ashland's registration was 2587; that of the county, 11,266, 7122 being men and 4144 women. Out of a total vote in the county of 9204, Ashland cast 1886. The total votes cast for all candidates were 108,831; for or against all measures, 190,569. The highest vote cast for any candidate was in behalf of G. A. Gardner for county clerk, 6675; for any measure, the Ashland Normal, 6218. The Western Normal received 5186. On an average, each voter passed upon the merits of twenty candidates on the ballot. The total cost of the general election was $4237.

PHOENIX PHACTLETS

J. D. Henry is quite sick at his home in South Phoenix.

Mrs. Will Frenk who has been quite ill for the past several weeks is improving.

The lecture by Professor Howe of the Oregon University drew a large audience last Friday evening. Phoenix school are bright and attractive and are fast becoming the community center for this vicinity. The large and representative audience of men and women and children that gathered in the auditorium last Friday evening was in a strange and pleasant contrast to the few who attended the lecture course two years ago.

The Civic club will meet at the city hall Tuesday afternoon. A good attendance is desired.

Notwithstanding the effects of war and drought bonafis has grown more this year than for the past three years. Dr. Matngren is building a fine stone building to be used as a drug store and office. The Christian congregation have just completed a handsome new church and which will soon be opened. The school district enlarged its grounds and the remodeled building is one of the most attractive in town. The high school and domestic science will be housed in the new building which has at a nominal cost been made handsome within and without. Two years ago Phoenix faced a disrupted high school and in order to rebuild, bravely carried on the school for one year with a few pupils. The money was well expended for now the high school has 22 pupils and more to be enrolled. G. H. Scoley, a graduate of an Iowa normal school and who has had 18 years experience in accredited high schools in Iowa and Washington, has charge of the high school. H. Ager, a graduate of an accredited high school who has had a summer normal course together with the required Oregon paper, is principal and aids assists in the high school. Miss Stella Denzer, a graduate of St. Paul's high school and normal, has charge of the domestic science, music and drawing and assists in the high school. Phoenix has eight teachers and so well planned were the taxpayers with the school and its management that at the school meeting which was held a week ago Saturday and which was one of the most largely attended in the history of the district, when the school board recommended a five and one-half mill levy, the taxpayers generously voted a six mill levy so that the board could carry on and strengthen the work they had begun with the hearty approval of the people of the district. It is a well known fact that a city can always be judged by its schools. Phoenix is building up a school that is a credit to the Rogue river valley and why should she not take care of her children? In doing so she is not only doing her duty by the children entrusted to her care but building up herself in particular and Rogue river valley in general. The improvement of the schools this year has held several pupils in town and attracted others who heretofore attended school in other cities. The manual training and domestic science are alone worth to our boys and girls all the money expended and which was so gladly voted by that large gathering of voters in the recent school meeting. Phoenix is waking up. Now watch her grow.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE EFFECTS ON HUMAN HEALTH

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 16.—

The anxiety that has been expressed in several quarters in regard to the effect upon human health of the present outbreak of the foot and mouth disease is regarded by government authorities as somewhat exaggerated. The most common fear is that the milk supply might become contaminated, but in view of the precautions that the local authorities in the infected areas are very generally taking, there is comparatively little danger of this. Milk from infected farms is not permitted to be shipped at all. The only danger is, therefore, that before the disease has manifested itself some infected milk might reach the market. For this reason, experts in the U. S. department of agriculture recommend pasteurization. As a matter of fact, however, pasteurization is recommended by the department anyway for all milk that is not very high grade and from tuberculin tested cows.

Pasteurization a Safeguard

It has been demonstrated by experiments which have been made in Denmark and Germany that pasteurization will serve as a safeguard against contagion from the foot and mouth disease just as readily as it does against typhoid fever, but in any event it must be thoroughly done—the milk must be heated to 145 degrees Fahrenheit and held at this temperature for thirty minutes.

In this country the foot and mouth disease has been so rare that there are few recorded cases of its transmission to human beings. In 1902 a few cases were reported in New England, and in 1908 in a few instances eruptions were found in the mouths of children which were believed to have been caused by contaminated milk. In both of these outbreaks the sale of milk was stopped as soon as the disease was found among the cattle. As long, therefore, as the disease can be confined by rigid quarantine to certain specified areas, the danger from this source is very small. Should the pestilence spread all over this country and become as general as it has been at various times in large areas in Europe, the problem would become more serious. Under any circumstances, however, pasteurization would be an efficient remedy. Where pasteurization is not possible, and where there is any reason to suspect that the disease may exist, the precaution of boiling milk might be advisable. Simple directions for pasteurizing milk at home, however, are contained in circular 127, which will be sent free on application to the U. S. department of agriculture.

Cows Lose Their Milk

Cows affected with the malignant form of the disease lose practically all of their milk. In mild cases, however, the decrease may be from one-third to one-half of the usual yield. The appearance of the milk also changes. It becomes thinner, bluish, and poor in fat. When the udder is affected the milk frequently contains coagulated fibrin and blood, so that a considerable sediment forms, while the cream is thin and of a dirty color. These changes, however, occur only when the disease is in an advanced stage, and as a matter of fact, the disease is not permitted to pass into an advanced stage, as any stricken animal is at once slaughtered.

Men who come in contact with diseased animals may also become infected. In adult human beings the contagion causes such symptoms as sore mouths, painful swallowing, fever and occasional eruptions on the hands, finger tips, etc. While causing considerable discomfort, however, the disease is rarely serious.

Where it is very prevalent among animals, some authorities believe that it is fairly general among human beings, but that the disturbances it causes are usually so slight that they are not brought to the attention of the family physician. There is, however, a very good reason for everyone giving the diseased animals as wide a berth as possible, namely, that otherwise they may easily carry the disease to perfectly healthy herds.

Beware of Infection

Federal inspectors engaged in the work of eradicating the pestilence are thoroughly equipped with rubber coats, hats, boots and gloves, which may be completely disinfected; and others who lack this equipment are strongly urged not to allow their curiosity to induce them to become a menace to their own and their neighbors' property.

The disease, in short, is dangerous because of the loss that it occasions to property, and not because of its effects upon the health of mankind. At present all infected herds are being slaughtered as soon as they are discovered, the carcasses buried and the premises thoroughly disinfected. Until all danger of infection has been removed in this way, the local authorities quarantine the milk.

Those who wish additional precautions are recommended to use pasteurized milk, but as has already been said, this recommendation holds true whether or not there is any fear of the foot and mouth disease.
