Harold Blake had always been a harum scarum sort of a chap during his course at Yale. His parents were immensely wealthy and upon Harold's return from college the boys had a big celebration at the club in his honor Mesdames Peelor and Blanchard. It of his home coming. Besides the Chinatown they meet the famous of Chinatown. Under his guidance Hanson, Mrs. Green, Mr. Peyton, G. the boys take in all the sights of the underworld, all of which are given in detail in the pictures. As they were nearing the historical Port Arthur school district have put in several cafe, a cry of "Help! Murder!" rang several days building a new woodshed out on the midnight air. Harold dashed to the rescue and found a villianous looking fellow brutaily beating a woman. Promptly felling the man with a blow of his fest he turned his attention to the woman. Imagine his surprise when the woman dealt him a resounding blow upon the cheek. This little maiden was to have quite an influence upon young Blake's career. After various other Chauncey Florey motored to Prospect wild escapades, including a raid upon a gambling house, Harold was disowned by his parents. He was about to end it all by jumping in the river when he was rescued by a crowd of New York gunmen. He soon became their leader, and many a wild deed was pertrated by them. He soon met Nell, the sunshine of the slums, and the picture goes on to show how a good woman can help a bad man-Harold finally is sent to Sing Sing starting a Glee club or singing prison, but Nell waits for him. The picture has a delightful ending. Harold, after he returned from prison. was a different man. He had drained his cup to its bitter dregs and had night with Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard been benefited and chastened by the draught.
