Considerable of a crowd gathered in the alley back of the It Theater Thursday night to hear an argument between the entire force of the Don Carlos dog show, and the managers of the theater. The argument waxed so warm that Officer Crawford was called, which did not lessen the pitch of the voices. Charges and counter charges were hurled back and fourth. The debate seemed to be over the replacing of a curtain. No arrests were made. The manager of the theater maintained that Don Carlos struck him twice in the face without cause or provocation.
