then in charge resigned rather than arrest Martin.

Sentiment in the Trail district is against Martin, neighbors claiming that he ruthlessly slew deer to secure bait for his trap. Before the coming of the game laws Martin sold venison in this city. Acquaintances describe him as being recklessly fearless and hot-tempered, with a supreme contempt for law. He is a socialist, and last summer when working on the Crater Lake trail created considerable comment by his defiant upholding of his theories. Hubbard arrested Martin once for violation of the game laws, to which he plead guilty. Since then Martin has ebbed and ebbed. Martin is a crack shot and a skilled hunter.

Prosecutor Kelly, Game Warden Sam Sandry and Coroner Kiblogg are still at the scene of the shooting collecting evidence. They are expected to return late today with the body of Hubbard, when an inquest and preliminary hearing will be held.

The murder was the chief topic of conversation in this city this morning and feeling of resentment was shown. Hubbard being well known and popular. A wild rumor was in circulation that Sheriff Singler had been shot in the leg.

Efficient Game Warden

Game Warden Arthur S. Hubbard was 38 years old and a resident of Ashland, his home being at 343 Granite street. He was the son of Ben C. Hubbard, a builder and contractor, also living there. He leaves a wife and two children, the wife being the daughter of Nym Long, well known resident of Ashland. Hubbard had been in the service over two years, having succeeded George Hargadine, also of Ashland.

Mr. Hubbard was insured for $1000 in the Oregon Life. His death is greatly regretted by all the sportsmen of southern Oregon, as he was a most efficient warden.

Mr. Hubbard was a carpenter by trade, and had served as a member of the Ashland police force.
