NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Announcement was made today on behalf of the Rockefeller Institute of the invention of an apparatus and the discovery of a new method of treatment, both designed to reduce the mortality from tetanus among soldiers wounded on European battle fields.

The institute's investigators, have found it was said, that most of the deaths among wounded men are due to tetanus and that the present method of treating tetanus has certain drawbacks.

MAGNETIC TORPEDO SPELLS DESTRUCTION FOR SUBMARINES

Time-squency has been the curse of the torpedo, Canton says, and 70 per cent of those discharged at moving targets fail to hit.

As the proximity of a steel ship alone is sufficient to guarantee a bullseye, the new torpedo, therefore, is 100 per cent deadly.

Canton has made more than 200 tests under all conditions and says that he has never yet failed to score a hit. The target each time was a moorboat run in zigzag course, but the torpedo, uncharged, of course, never failed to find it.

"Get me the searoom to maneuver and a high-power boat equipped with my torpedoes," says the inventor "and I could wipe out a great fleet of superdreadnaughts of the New York type."

The New York of the United States navy is the newest and most perfect battleship afloat.

Only Efficient Torpedo

If the torpedo is anywhere near as efficient as is claimed, any one of the present belligerents could afford to give a fortune for it, because it offers the only weapon yet discovered against the submarine.

If warships invite destruction by the mere metal of their hulls, the more highly sensitive submarine will attract the weird torpedo to its depths. The submarine would be rendered useless in the morn of its triumph.

Canton declares his torpedo is good for ten miles, its gyroscope controlling it for eight miles and its electrical machinery adding two or three more. Its rate of speed—forty knots an hour—is almost double that of the first-line battleships and greatly in excess of that of the fastest destroyers.

In appearance it is hardly different from the ordinary torpedo now in use, except that it has two arms of nickel-silver attached to each side, projecting at right angles. At the end of these arms are wire magnetic coils. Upon these magnetic coils hangs the success of the torpedo. A high-frequency current passes between them, and presence of any great mass of metal changes the self-induction which affects the electric relays, and these, in turn, operate the motor which controls the rudder. Thus the torpedo will steer for its target and follow it, no matter how often the target changes its course.

Gyroscope Used

The gyroscope, which keeps the torpedo on an even keel and on a straight course, is effective until the torpedo comes within magnetic range of a ship. Then it is automatically cut out, and the torpedo's diving fins turn to make the machine dive deeper and strike the warship on the unarmored portion of the hull.

A warship's plate extends only a few feet below the water line. The torpedo carries the regulation war head with a charge of 300 or 400 pounds of wet gun cotton. Its first explosion sends it through the hull into the ship's vitals, and the second explosion tears the hull to pieces. No ship can remain afloat more than ten minutes after being hit, the inventor says.

Held in leash by a cable two or three miles in length, an uncharged torpedo could be used to hunt out mines and halt over the spot until the ship caught up and destroyed them with shells!

"DON'T GO INTO MOVIES," ADVISES MARGUERITE COURTOT

Marguerite Courtot

(By Esther Hoffmann.)

"I have been told that you are the youngest leading lady in the movie business, Miss Courtot," I began, after being introduced to Marguerite Courtot at the movie studio.

"I have no doubt that that is so," she answered, "though, of course, I am not the youngest actress. Not in these days when they put ten days' old babies in the pictures. A great big 17-year-old girl, like me, ought to be able to make her own way without robbing the cradle of its glory."

"I had a little glory of my own, too, when I was a tiny tot," she went on. "One of my earliest recollections is of winning a pretty baby prize. Since then I have won nine beauty prizes, and have just had the honor of being chosen one of America's most beautiful girls."

"I was born in Summit, N. J., but lived in Switzerland for a long time. I never thought of going into moving pictures until it was suggested to me by one of the Kalem directors. Mother made me finish school first and then I went to Florida with the movie company."

"Do many girls want you to advise them about going into the moving picture business?" I asked.

"Yes, they do, and I am always glad to say to them: 'Girls, if you have a good home in a small place—stay there.' The moving picture companies have more applicants for positions than they need, and since the business has grown so, they will not take an untrained girl unless she be of exceptional beauty. They want actors, not merely pretty faces, for the motion pictures nowadays."

MONEY IN POULTRY IN ROGUE VALLEY

(Grants Pass Courier)

A careful record kept by Joe Martelletti for each month of 1914 proves that the Rogue valley biddy can be made to produce hen fruit at the time of the year when the price is high as well as when it hits the bottom of the market. Mr. Martelletti started out on January 1, 1914, with 26 White Rock hens, and this was the highest number in the laying pens at any time during the year, some being broody and other sold later in the season and replaced with pullets in the fall. During the 12 months, according to Mr. Martelletti's record, the flock produced 6311 eggs, or but one less than 526 dozen. The average price received was 36 cents per dozen. The record of eggs laid for each month in the year, with the number of hens in the lay pens for each month, was as follows: January, 26 hens, 627 eggs; February, 32 hens, 627 eggs; March, 33 hens, 798 eggs; April, 29 hens, 624 eggs; May, 22 hens, 391 eggs; June, 39 hens, 510 eggs; July, 31 hens, 587 eggs; August, 32 hens, 537 eggs; September, 18 hens, 469 eggs; October, 20 hens, 378 eggs; November, 25 hens, 426 eggs; December, 39 hens, 528 eggs. The returns from the flock in eggs and chickens sold during the year amounted to $261.33.
